Coal Accord Reached, End Of Strike Due In 72 Hours

Sub-Committees Sign Agreement; Approval of Main Group Sure.

Day Workers Win 50-Cent Increase

400,000 Men Are Set to Return to Mines In Compromise.

By the United Press.

Two committees representing miners and operators last night approved a new wage agreement which will send 400,000 soft-coal strikers back to work in 72 hours.

First reports from the smoke-filled conference room indicated that the new agreement would call for:

An increase of 50 cents a day for day workers.

An increase of 9 cents a ton for the men who dig and load the coal.

An increase of 10 per cent in the wages for those doing dead-work.

Six-Hour Day Scrapped.

Miners voluntarily scrapped their demand for a six-hour day.

Two sub-committees of 4 and 16, composed equally of miners and operators, signed the agreement and agreed to certify it to the committee of 56 shortly before 7:30 p. m.

The committee of 56 was promptly summoned into session at 8:30 p. m. Its approval was considered routine by officials of both factions.

Later the agreement must be submitted to the full Appalachian conference of approximately 250 representatives of the workers and employers.

The break in the long deadlock surrounding the negotiations was reported to President Roosevelt by Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady as the Chief Executive prepared to leave on his Western trip.

Mr. Roosevelt issued no statement.

Compromise Made.

The agreement approved constituted a compromise between the demands orginally presented by the miners and the position of the operators.

The original union demands were:

An increase of 15 cents a ton for tonnage workers.

An increase of 20 per cent for deadwork.

A six-hour day.

An increase of 50 cents a day for day workers composed of men who do carpenter work and other tasks in the mines but who do not actually mine coal.

The brunt of the negotiations fell upon a sub-committee of four—Charles O'Neill, of the central Pennsylvania operators; L. T. Putnam, of the southern West Virginia producers, and Philip Murray and Van Bittner, mine union officials. They quibbled for days over a penny and a half a ton increase for piece workers and finally the employers capitulated to the miners.

Miners Stood Fast.

In this instance, the miners stood fast to their demands for a 9-cent-a-ton increase, while operators protested they were unable to pay more than 7½ cents over the present rates.

Shortly after 7:30 o'clock tonight union scale committees representing the various districts suddenly were summoned to the Shoreham Hotel, where the negotiations had been held.

"I guess its all over, or we wouldn't have been called," said one miner as he led his group to an elevator.

Sen. McAdoo Hurt in Crash

Auto Hits Pole on Coast; Injuries Not Believed Serious.

By the United Press.

Los Angeles, Sept. 26.—Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, 71-year-old junior Senator from California, was injured in an automobile accident tonight.

He was taken to Good Samaritan Hospital by radio officers, who reported he suffered a bruised chest and nose. His injuries were not believed serious.

Radio patrolmen said Senator McAdoo smashed his car into a telephone pole, swerving to avoid another car.

Physicians at the hospital declined to say whether his injuries were serious. The Senator was driving alone, and was conscious when policemen pulled him from his wrecked car.

He asked to be taken to the hospital.

Youth Confesses Double Poisoning

Poison Slayer Ready 'to Take His Medicine'

Student to Plead Guilty to Killing Relatives Who Raised Him.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Sept. 26.—Frail Leroy Drake, 19, prize Sunday school student and amateur chemist, was described by police tonight as ready to "take his medicine" for poisoning his kindly aunt and uncle and burying them in the Pacific.

The sad-faced youth disclosed his intention to plead guilty, investigators said, after an alleged confession which led them to the bodies of the victims—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Steinheuer—in an automobile at the bottom of the ocean.

Police Detective Frank Condaffer said the mild-mannered youth admitted:

1. Getting into trouble on an automobile theft charge.
2. Giving a virulent poison to his benevolent relatives and watching them "keel over" in death.
3. Placing their bodies in the family automobile and sending it hurtling over a cliff into the ocean near here.
4. Forging a $272 check on his uncle's bank account.
5. Going out with his girl after the weird tragedy.

Although Condaffer said greed apparently had motivated the young chemistry and engineering student, they quoted the boy as saying he didn't want the Steinheuer's money

Ocean Flier Smiles At Storm Warning

By the Associated Press.

Dansville, N. W., Sept. 26.—Warned that snow and ice might weigh down the wings of the airplane and bring him to death in the north Atlantic, a young pilot went ahead with plans tonight for a transatlantic flight to Portugal to surprise his mother.

The pilot, 26-year-old Joe Costa, smiled away the grim warning from Holger Hoiriis, Harbor Grace, Denmark flier in 1931, and went ahead with the task of tuning up his plane.

Costa, mostly self educated in the business of flying, plans to take his 54-year-old father, John Costa, with him.

Dawes Claims Fear Has Gone, Ending Slump

Return of Mass Confidence Prevents Relapse, He Tells Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Charles G. Dawes, the prophet of current recovery, declared tonight that "mass confidence in a major depression, once regained, is not subject to frequent oscillations."

Speaking to many of the business men who last December 12 heard him predict forthrightly that a revival of demand for durable goods would start last July—as many agree now it did—and would signalize the end of the depression, the former Vice President disclosed results of his summer-long study of "the three great depressions of the United States." They were those starting in 1873, 1893 and 1929.

His investigation, the doughty general asserted, assured him that those "unquiet minds" who fear breaks in the upward movement of general business have little actual basis for their anxiety.

Great depressions, he said, result from an impact of mass fear destroying mass confidence. The course of a depression is like that of a disease. If the constitution of the patient is unable to overcome the germ, the disease must run its course.

Similarly, he said, if an impact of mass fear finds the general business or credit structure unsound, a major depression results.

But once the mass confidence is restored, the economic conva-

Woman Fights Off Son, Husband to Kill Herself

Spring Valley, N. Y., Sept. 26 (AP). Mrs. Harry Kleinman, 38, fought off her husband and 15-year-old son with a baseball bat today as they vainly tried to save her from death by poison, which police said was self-administered. Patrolman Joseph Mason reported that the son, Harry, jr., told him his mother stunned the father and menaced him with the heavy bat when they tried to frustrate the suicide.

The son told Mason he and his father came in from an adjoining room and saw the poison burns on Mrs. Kleinman's face. As they rushed to her aid, Harry said, she grasped the bat, striking the father and knocking him to the floor. "She died before our eyes," the boy said.

Pope Sends Peace Plea To 250,000

Eucharist Congress at Cleveland Hears His Radio Prayer.

Cardinal Hayes Delivers Papal Benediction to Pilgrim Host.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Sept. 26.—A papal benediction bestowed by Patrick Cardinal Hayes, of New York, upon thousands of pilgrims, and the apostolic blessing, invoked by Pope Pius XI in an international radio broadcast, terminated late today the Seventh National Eucharistic Congress.

The Pope's address to an estimated 250,000 persons assembled in and about the city's lakeside stadium followed the benediction service and climaxed a day of pageantry and solemn ceremonial.

Speaking in Italian, the Pontiff voiced a plea for a united prayer for peace, to which he alluded as "that peace so much desired by all—peace to those who are near and peace to those who are far."

His vast audience listened to the voice of their spiritual father in rapt attention. All who were able in the limited space, kneeled as the Pope pronounced the words of blessing upon the throng.

Crowd Overflows Bowl.

The participating crowd was swelled by hundreds who, finding the giant bowl filled to capacity, heard the services and the papal broadcast over a public address system which extended many blocks distant into the business district.

At the conclusion of the broadcast, the 20,000 persons who had joined to form a living monstrance on the field left the stadium in a recessional comparable to the lavish processional that prefaced the final service.

Reverently gazing upon an altar in the center of the human monstrance, a crowd of approximately 175,000 had made obeisance to their Eucharistic Lord in the concluding ceremonies of the congress.

The living monstrance, a spectacle formed within the huge amphitheater, was composed of 20,000 church dignitaries and laity, many of them children, in colorful attire.

A gigantic religious procession moved majestically through the streets banked with spectators to the scene of the concluding cere-

He was taken to Hotel Dieu Hospital, where his temperature was between 102 and 103.

Legion Asks Cash Bonus, No Inflation

Congress' Passage of Bill to Issue New Money Is Condemned.

Rep. Patman Is Booed as Conclave Ends; Iowan New Commander.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Sept. 26.—A tumultuous convention of the American Legion ended late today with the election of J. Ray Murphy, of Iowa, to lead the World War veterans in a renewed fight for immediate cash payment of the bonus.

Tonight special trains speeded in all directions from St. Louis, and highways were crowded with motor cars, as the tired rear guard of the thousands who attended the seventeenth national meeting turned homeward.

In a colorful closing session, featured by boos, cat-calls and marching delegations, the veterans called on Congress to consider the bonus question without reference to "issues of Government finance or theories of currency with which the legion does not intend to become involved."

The action, strengthening the demand made by the legion at its Miami, Fla., convention last year, was an emphatic disapproval of congressional passage of the later vetoed Patman bill, which provided for bonus payment through the issuance of new currency.

Patman Is Booed.

The author of the bill, Representative Wright Patman, of Texas, a legionnaire, provoked a stormy 45-minute debate when he appeared on the floor to speak against the resolution.

His remarks barely audible in a chorus of boos and rhythmic handclapping, the Representative pleaded with the delegates to leave the method of bonus financing to Congress.

The convention was in a frenzy, its delegates milling on the floor, when Representative W. B. MacFarlane, also of Texas, arose and launched into similar argument.

Wielding his gavel so vigorously that he broke a table, National Commander Frank N. Belgrano, jr., was unable to maintain order as the heated debate reached its climax with the plea by Representative Charles Halleck, of Indiana, not to "tie inflation or expansion around the neck of the bonus."

With a deafening roar, the 1,207 delegates, lustily aided by non-delegate legionnaires who crowded the 3,600-seat hall to its doors,

Silas Strawn Derides 'Breathing Spell' Talk

Chicago, Sept. 26 (AP).—Silas Strawn, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, chuckled publicly today at President Roosevelt's promise of a "breathing spell" for business.

"I don't know what the 'breathing spell' means," Strawn told the Western division of the American Mining Congress.

"I don't know whether it means we are almost strangled to death and we are going to get started again and then are going to be choked to death again, or what. But I welcome the 'breathing spell' and hope it will continue."

Combining Business, Politics, Roosevelt Is Off to West Coast

15,000 Mile Trip Will Include Dedication of Boulder Dam, Address at San Diego Fair; to See Party Leaders, Fish in the Pacific.

By the United Press.

President Roosevelt, adept at combining business and politics with his vacations, prepared to leave the Capital last night on a 15,000-mile trip embodying all three.

The business consists of speaking at the dedication of Boulder Dam and at the San Diego Exposition. The speeches are expected to touch on political issues, and in addition Mr. Roosevelt will see political leaders on his trip across the country. Afterward the President will board the cruiser Houston for a leisurely fishing trip in Pacific waters, a visit to an isle of buried treasure, and a bit of adventure on a secret island said never before to have been visited by white men.

There will be other speeches as the presidential special stops in its trip through the prairie and mountain States. The first of these, the White House announced, will be at Fremont, Nebr., Saturday noon. Mr. Roosevelt is expected to talk for about 20 minutes from the rear platform of the train. He will talk on the agricultural situation.

His Boulder Dam speech, scheduled for Monday noon, and the San Diego address, at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday, will be broadcast to the Nation. Their subject matter was not disclosed. In addition, the President will give a talk in the Hollywood Bowl on Tuesday.

The presidential party included Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes and Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, Capt. Wilson Brown and Col. Edwin M. Watson, White House naval and military aids, respectively, and Capt. Ross T. McIntire, White House physician, all of whom will accompany Mr. Roosevelt on the Pacific cruise.

Others scheduled to travel to the West Coast were Keith Morgan, official of the Warm Springs Foundation; Turner Battle, Assistant Secretary of Labor, and Stephen T. Early, Marvin H. McIntyre, Miss Marguerite Lehand and Miss Grace Tully, of the secretarial staff.

In addition, Senator Alben Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, was a guest as far as North Vernon, Ind., and Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, will proceed as far as Boulder Dam.

In preparation, Mr. Roosevelt spent the fourth day of his stay in the Capital going through a heavy schedule of appointments, which included visits from Chairman Anning S. Prall, of the Communications Commission; Undersecretary of State William Phillips, Chairman Frank R. McNinch and Basil Manley, of the Power Commission; Rexford G. Tugwell, head of the Rural Resettlement Administration; President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor; Chairman James H. Fahey, of the Home Owners Loan Corporation; Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Budget Director Daniel W. Bell, Hopkins and Comptroller General John R. McCarl.

During the four days, Mr. Roosevelt saw the head of nearly every regular and emergency Government agency in Washington.

Sebastian Escapes Army Ouster, Rank Cut to Lowest in Service

By the Associated Press.

A court-martial sentence dismissing Second Lieut. Henry A. Sebastian from the Army was commuted by President Roosevelt yesterday to make him the lowest ranking officer in the service.

Sebastian, former West Point football star, was charged with having married Harriet Hagman, Broadway dancer, under an assumed name while he was still a cadet at the military academy in 1931.

West Point regulations deny cadets a horse, dog, wife or mustache, and provide that they must sign certificates upon their return from any leave declaring they have not been married. Sebastian was charged with having signed such a certificate despite his marriage to Miss Hagman.

An Army court-martial in New York found him guilty and sentenced him to dismissal from the Army. When the case came before the President for final decision, however, he commuted the sentence to equivalent of demotion.

More than 300 cadets were graduated with Sebastian, and, under the President's decision, he is placed at the foot of the promotion list, making him the junior officer of the entire Army.

Sebastian and his wife were remarried in a church ceremony at Newburgh, N. Y., in 1934, after his graduation and appointment as a second liuetenant, and he informed the court he considered that his real marriage.

Sebastian was brought up for court-martial after his wife sued for separation alleging mistreatment during a party on Governor's Island, N. Y., and revealing his marriage while he was still a cadet.

3-Month Truce Is Voted While New Committee Probes Dispute.

Violator Would Be At War With World

Acceptance by Ethiopia of Findings Would Bar Conflict Forever.

By the United Press.

Geneva, Sept. 26.—Italy cannot go to war with Ethiopia before January without becoming an outlaw nation, under action taken by the League of Nations Council today.

The council voted to proceed under article XV of the League Covenant, paving the way for international economic or military measures against Italy if she marches on Ethiopia.

Under article XII, when any dispute is submitted to the Council under article XV, League members cannot resort to war until three months after the Council adopts recommendations. The council appointed a committee of 13—one expert from each member country—to make a report on the Italo-Ethiopian dispute with recommendations for settlement.

The committee is expected to complete its report within ten days. The Council will approve it early in October, beginning a three-month compulsory truce.

Would Be at War.

If Italy should violate the truce she automatically would be at war with every League member.

Furthermore, if Ethiopia should accept the committee recommendations, Italy would be bound by article XV never to resort to war against her.

League legal experts denied reports published abroad that the three-month peace period began September 4, when the Council undertook to solve the dispute, and that it would expire December 4. They said the erroneous report was based on misreading of the Covenant.

Guido Rocco, of the Italian delegation, declared Italy henceforth will refrain from participating in any public session of the Council at which the Italo-Ethiopian situation is discussed. On the other hand, Ethiopia's delegate, Tekla Hawariat, and his French legal adviser, Prof. Gaston Jeze, sat at the foot of the great curved table.

Italians Sip Cocktails.

While delegates of Argentina, Australia, Chile, Denmark, Ecuador, France, Great Britain, Poland, Portugal, Rumania, Spain, Turkey and Russia met at the famous horse-shoe table and voted unanimously for a strong stand to preserve peace and the League's prestige, the Italian delegates stood at the League bar sipping "negus" cocktails—"three drinks and you roar like a lion."

The committee of 13 decided that the Committee of Five, whose proposals were rejected by Italy and accepted by Ethiopia as a basis for negotiation, would continue to sit—ready to revive conciliation efforts whenever opportunity should arise.

A spokesman for the Italians said "we believe it is an encouraging sign that the committee of 13 decided to maintain the Committee of Five and leave the path to conciliation open." Delegates wondered whether this was a "diplomatic statement" or an indication that Italy is ready to talk reasonable terms.

The committee of 13 report probably will be considerably less generous to Italy than the five-nation offer.

Committee of Five Scored.

Russia and other Council powers hold that the Committee of Five offer violates the Covenant's pledge to protect Ethiopia. Soviet Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff and Rumanian Premier Nicholas Titulescu bitterly attacked the committee at this morning's secret session of the Council.

Both explained that their votes should not be interpreted as favoring the five-power report, and the Little Entente leader, Titulescu, asserted the proposals violated the League's safeguards to members. The Rumanian delegate charged the big powers—apparently referring to Britain and France—were foisting upon the League a policy incompatible with the Covenant and in disregard of Ethiopia's sovereignty.

The United Sates was represented at the private session by Hugh

School's Head Kills Official, Ends Own Life

Clarksburg Principal, Ill, Was Embittered Over Mother's Discharge.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 26.—Riddled with revolver bullets, Dr. J. W. Corder, 55, president of the Harrison County School Board, was slain this afternoon in his office here by James Tracey, 32, principal of the Mount Claire High School, who then killed himself.

Corder was sitting in his office talking with Laco Wolfe, former chief of police of Clarksburg, when Tracey entered the outer room and fired twice through an inner door, sending two bullets into Corder's chest. After his victim fell to the floor Tracey shot him in the back at least twice more.

Tracey then turned the pistol on himself and sent a bullet into his lower chest. Both men died almost instantly, Wolfe said.

The assassin, ill some time from a "bleeding cancer," apparently got up from his bed, leaving his pajamas on as he dressed, came to Corder's office and shot his victim on sight without speaking a single word.

A note was found on Tracey's person, addressed to his mother telling her that although his doctors had

Geneva Action Creates Grave U. S. Problems

Violation of Truce Would Have Serious Effect on Trade Relations.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Invocation by the League of Nations Council of Article XV of its Covenant in the Italo-Ethiopian dispute, action which in effect forbids both countries to go to war pending a Council report, yesterday created potentially grave problems for the United States.

For should Italy defy the League of Nations and proceed with force of arms against Ethiopia prior to three months after adoption of a report by the Council, countries comprising the League are pledged immediately to regard Italy as having engaged in an act of war against them and to undertake economic, and possibly military, sanctions against Benito Mussolini's country.

This point has not been reached in the Italo-Ethiopian situation and American officials fervently hope it may be averted. Nevertheless, they fully realize the problem which such a result would create for this Government and, accordingly, are examining this Government's policy in order to be prepared for the crisis if it comes.

Sheriffs in Power Firm Fight Raid Home, Kill Mother, Hold 3

By the Associated Press.

Scotch Plains, N. J., Sept. 26.—Deputy sheriffs charged with the task of arresting John Crempa, militant farmer foe of New Jersey's largest utilities company, for contempt of court, shot and killed Crempa's wife, Sophie, at the family's home today.

The 40-year-old woman fell with fatal bullet wounds on the front porch of the small Terrill road farmhouse during a pitched battle between the family and the officers. Deputy Sheriff Edward Carolan, heading the officers, said the Crempas, including their daughter, Camille, 21, fired the first shots after being driven out of their house by tear gas bombs.

Crempa, 43, surrendered when he saw his wife fall at his side. He was hit in the left knee and a finger by bullets, was placed under arrest and taken to Mulenberg Hospital, Plainfield.

The daughter also was arrested. John Crempa, jr., was taken into custody by officers at a riding academy last night.

Today's fatal battle was the climax to a four-year feud between Crempa and the Public Service Electric & Gas Co. The trouble began when the farmer refused to accept a condemnation award of $800 for a power line right of way across a section of his property.

They failed to reach an agreement, but the power line was built. Since then, the company has alleged, Crempa has repeatedly hampered service by short circuiting the line.

The power company finally took the matter before the New Jersey Court of Chancery and Crempa was —Great Britain and France particularly—would require them to take whatever steps are necessary not only to sever all trade and financial relations between their own and Italian nationals but also to precent "all financial, commercial or personal intercourse between nationals of the convenant-breaking state and the nationals of any other State, whether a member of the League or not."

Whatever may be the realities of the situation, this Government feels it must be prepared to chart a course of action, in the event the letter and spirit of the League Covenant are closely followed, which would not involve this Nation in the conflict.

Should Italy, without any more provocation than now exists, pour its troops into Ethiopia before January, it is believed here that both the letter and spirit of the Covenant would require Great Britain, as one nation, to use its mighty sea arm to prevent "financial, commercial or personal intercourse" between Italy and the United States.

enjoined from molesting its property. The company returned later and said Crempa had not stopped. The farmer was adjudged in contempt and his arrest was ordered.

For several months Sheriff C. Wesley Collins of Union County has tried to take Crempa into custody. All his attempts failed. The last time, he told the court recently, the family and neighbors drove deputies away with brooms, sticks and stones and by allegedly firing shots in the air.

Carolan and four other deputies—Vincent Carolan, Charles Remley, Joseph Coakley and James Gabrielson—were sent to the farm today. When they arrived they found the windows and doors locked. Carolan broke in a side window and tossed in a tear gas bomb. Another officer did the same at the front.

Crempa, Carolan said, came out the front door with a shotgun and allegedly fired several shots before the officers found cover. Carolan said his men returned the fire, a bullet or bullets striking Mrs. Crempa when she rushed out firing a .45-caliber pistol. Crempa, he said, threw up his hands but Camille dashed out of the house and along a stone wall, firing as she went. She was caught and disarmed.

As soon as the firing ceased, an ambulance was called, but Mrs. Crempa was dead. Prosecutor Abe J. David immediately began an investigation, calling in the deputies for questioning.

By Raymond Clapper

ONE disturbing thing happened at the Republican national executive committee meeting here—disturbing at least to those Republicans who believe that the farm belt must be won over, not clubbed down into submission.

All agree that the popularity of AAA checks in the farm belt is the hardest nut the party has to crack. Therefore, Republicans decide to establish a Chicago field base for the farm drive.

The executive committee has picked its man for this job, probably the most difficult party assignment of all. And, with the complete blindness of a New York City politician, the man they pick for this delicate task is Harrison E. Spangler, a lawyer at Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Spangler is a man who already has rubbed the farmers the wrong way. That he was born and reared and is living in Iowa is his chief recommendation for this post. About his only one.

Spangler is a political intimate of Hoover. He is not a country lawyer. For the size of his town he has an excellent corporation practice. He is one of those Republican politicians who think the sun rises and sets with Charles D. Hilles, of New York, the most powerful single person in the party organization. If Hilles didn't have a hand in putting Spangler in charge of the Republican farm drive, it will take a stack of affidavits as thick as a Bible to prove it.

Let that pass. Spangler could, in spite of these handicaps, still by a remote chance, be the man for the job. But there is some further recent testimony on that point. Spangler was one of the group, backed by Eastern Hilles Republicans, who moved in and took charge of the recent Republican grass roots conference. It originally was projected at a Kansas day dinner at Topeka. Spangler moved in and with the help of others, succeeded in taking the meeting to Springfield, Ill. He became the chairman of the organization committee. As a sop to the Kansas group, they threw the permanent chairmanship of the meeting to young John Hamilton, Kansas national committeeman. Spangler held the post of temporary chairman and keynoter.

In his keynote, Spangler asserted that the Midwest asks no special favors from the Government, denounced the Administration's farm policy, lambasted the processing tax, and offered the farmers nothing except an invitation to grow all that they could possibly produce. He had no suggestion as to what should be done with these surpluses. While waiving, on behalf of the farmer, any claim to special favors, he was silent about ending the favors which the industrial East has enjoyed through the protective tariff. His proposal was to deprive the farmer of any protection and let him scramble for parity with the industrial section of the country as best it could.

His speech was cheered, but the resolutions committee refused to follow through and instead adopted a vague set of resolutions which were cited by Republican farm-belt Representatives in Congress as justifying their support of the AAA amendments.

Spangler is a good, solid Republican, with convictions which he is courageous enough to express whether they are popular or not. Which is all to his credit. The point is that his convictions are not the ones which will warm the farm belt and convince them that he can help them.

Republicans have not evolved their alternative to the Roosevelt farm problem. They probably will not until the national convention meets. Meantime, the missionary they send out to win the farmers' good will is one whose approach is that of the Eastern Republican of whom the farm belt always has been suspicious.

In some other respects the Republicans showed a much better feel of the situation. For instance, they paid little attention to the Constitution issue. Opinions differ as to the desirability for various reasons of pressing this issue and attempting to scare the country into thinking that the Democrats are out to abolish the Constitution. In some sections, where the press has fanned up the question, large crowds turn out. This is notably true in Chicago. Others report that in their sections mention of the Constitution is about like denouncing sin. Or as a Republican editor in Kansas puts it: "The save-the-Constitution talk is all right and is important, but folks are not going to warm up to it like they will to something that they can see and put their hands on in their own communities."

Also little importance is attached to the speculation, mostly in newspapers, about nominating a Democratic candidate for Vice President. That idea is on the way out among Republican leaders, few of whom ever very seriously considered it.

More and more Republican leaders are conscious that there is one big real and practical question, which hits Mr. Roosevelt in his weakest spot—that is the waste, carelessness, happy-go-lucky improvising, the riotous expenditures, and the administrative fumbling in the works program, and less conspicuously in many other sectors of the Administration. That is a matter which seriously disturbs many of Mr. Roosevelt's friends. The Republicans have him wide open there.

Col. Frank Knox, the Illinois favorite son, is hammering in his speeches on the Constitution issue.

To which Col. Knox snapped back, bringing down the house, "You can't eat the Bible, either."

tried to keep it from him, he knew he was dying of cancer and asking her to carry on "for my sake and forgive me if you think I did wrong."

The murder is believed to have been the result of the recent school strike in the county and the failure of the school board to grant the demands of the striking student body and their parents.

The assassin's mother, Mrs. Dora Tracey, served a number of years as secretary to County Superintendent Wade H. Coffindaffer, but was not re-employed when the school board organized this year. Officials believe this may have motivated the murder.

mony. Police Chief George Matowitz estimated the throng at 500,000 people, the largest ever to witness a Cleveland parade.

Corps after corps of uniformed church societies proceeded toward the stadium. Wave upon wave of ever-changing color swept toward the field.

Cardinal Hayes, bearing the eucharist in a gem-studded monstrance which contained the Sacred Host, advanced with solemn step beneath a cloth of gold canopy borne by fourth degree Knights of Columbus. His erect figure was clothed in the scarlet of his office, partially covered by a glittering vestment of the benediction service.

Thirty-five archbishops and bishops, wearing white miters and the rich robes of formal ritual, preceded the papal legate. A like number of bishops followed the cardinal.

Archbishop Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States; members of the cardinal's suite, Archbishop T. McNicholas, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Bishop Joseph Schrembs, of Cleveland, host to the religious festival, accompanied the legate.

Scores of girls garbed in the papal white and gold scattered flowers in the path of the dignitaries.

Monsignori in purpe-edged cassocks, monks in the autere habits of their orders, learned Jesuits in solemn black, clerics of the Oriental Rite in sparkling vestments, abbots in the garb of their rank—these contributed to elevate the procession to one awesome dignity.

Music fro ma score of Catholic school bands died away as the procession approached the stadium and the march merged into a silent advance save for prayers and hymns carried from thec rowded bowl over a public address system.

The thousands who lined the city's streets joined with those at the field in response o the countless ave's and pater noster's.

Column upon column swung into two entrances to the stadium, rejoined ranks and took their places to form the monstrance—a precious receptacle for the host.

The gold of the cardinal legate and other prelates grouped about the altar comprised its center. The cerise and purple of the monsignori edged the gold.

Priests in cassock and surplice, altar boys in a variety of hues, academic caps and gowns, native costumes of church societies, Knights of St. Gregory and of St. John and Knights of Columbus completed the great tableau.

League Votes 3-Month Truce In War Crisis

To Declare Italy Outlaw If She Attacks Ethiopia Before Jan. 1.

Wilson, who voted with the Council on the election of members to the Central Opium Board, since the United States is a signatory of the League's anti-opium conventions. He left before the Italo-Ethiopian dispute came up.

Council Stays in Session.

Dr. Enrique Ruiz-Guinzau, of Argentina, presiding, proposed that the council remain in session for duration of the crisis and that a committee be appointed under article 15 consisting of all the council members except Italy to draft recommendations. The proposals were adopted.

The chairman then invited Ethiopia's representatives, Hawariat and Jeze, to sit at the foot of the council table. The committee of five report was presented by Dr. Salvadore de Madariaga, of Spain, chairman.

Capt. Anthony Eden, of Britain, speaking in support of Ruiz-Guinzau's motions, said that "we must embark on this task with all seriousness, but also without undue delay." He added that while the report is being drafted, governments will consider further measures to safeguard peace. These words from the representative of a power which has challenged Italy's show of force by massing the greatest battle fleet in the world in the Mediterranean, were impressive.

Frail little Hawariat assured the council his government "would give the greatest consideration to any suggestions."

Laval Supports Britain.

Then, amid a hush that indicated the tenseness of the moment, France's Premier Pierre Laval arose and threw his lot with Britain, asserting the appointment of a committee under Article X is "the only step possible for the Council to take."

"The Council," Laval said, "will accomplish its task according to the letter and spirit of the Covenant."

France probably has not yet decided whether she will join in sanctions against Italy, but the premier's words were encouraging to those favoring a strong League front.

The committee of 13 will meet Friday and Saturday to chart the general line of its recommendations and start drafting Monday.

Diplomats interpreted the council's action as a grave threat to Italy that the League might invoke Article XVI, entailing sanctions in case of war. Such punishment probably would begin with economic measures and proceed to military intervention if necessary.

It was understood the committee's report would follow these general lines: A history of the conflict and of mediation efforts, veiled judgment of Italian policy, and recommendations for settlement along the general lines of the committee of five offer but conceding less to Italy. It is inconceivable that Italy would accept such a proposal.

200 Ordered Out As Mine Pickets

Only 1 Union Plant Open in Fairmont Area.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fairmont, W. Va., Sept. 26.—More than 200 pickets have been ordered out in this mining district to influence truck miners not to work the duration of the soft coal strike.

Joseph Angelo, international representative of the United Mine Workers of America, temporarily in charge of district 31, issued the order after making an investigation which showed several small mines in operation, whose owners use trucks in transporting coal to market, and which do not run under union contract.

Similar orders are expected to be issued in Randolph and Upshur counties, where there are several truck mines.

The only union mine in operation in the region is the Rivesville opening of the Consolidation Coal Co., which supplies fuel to the power plant of the Monogahela System, operator of street cars and electric light systems throughout the district. It is being run under special agreement between the miners' union and the coal company.

Poison Slayer to 'Take Medicine'

"because they didn't have more than $1,000."

Officers, however, said they had found the wills of both victims, naming Drake as their beneficiary in case both preceded him in death.

They also said Steinheuer recently had transferred $1,700 from a savings to a checking account. The amount of the Steinheuer property was not immediately determined.

Bodies Are Recovered.

Drake, who told officers he hadn't missed Sunday school in five years, was said by officers to be ready "to stand up and take my medicine and plead guilty."

The bodies were recovered early today, 35 feet below the surface of the harbor.

Condaffer said Drake took officers to the harbor and told divers where to look for the bodies, identified the bodies as they were brought up, and confessed putting poison in their coffee last Thursday, causing the quick death at their own dinner table.

Authorities found two teaspoons reeking with the acrid odor of poison in an alley. Stuffed behind a radio they discovered the wills of the 60-year-old Steinheuer and his wife, ten years his junior.

Both provided that in the event of the death of the other, Drake was to receive one-third in the deceased's estate. In the event of death to both, Drake was to receive all.

Drake told police, they said, that his motive was to "end the worry of my uncle and aunt over the mess (of the stolen car) I got myself into."

"My aunt's worrying caused my uncle to become ill," police quoted him as saying. "She was ashamed to go out on the street. She would try to pull herself together and kinda straighten up her face every time she stepped out of the door."

Had Befriended Youth.

"I had given my aunt so many heartaches I thought that to poison her would be the best way to right the wrongs," he was quoted as saying, "but now I'm afraid it wasn't."

Dr. George M. Rourke, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Long Beach, where the Steinheuers worshiped, described Drake as studious, "with a genius for mechanical and scientific subjects." Dr. Rourke said the youth "had a quick grasp of situations" as president of the Junior College, Christian Endeavor Society.

The minister said the Steinheuers came to Long Beach five years ago from New Brunswick, N. J., and resided there until about a month ago, when they moved to Los Angeles. He said they had taken care of Drake since his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Drake, who lived in Washington, were divorced "about 15 or 16 years ago."

Miss Veula Hayden, his fiancee, a dietitian at a Long Beach hospital, said she met Drake at Long Beach Polytechnic High School, from which they were graduated in 1933. She said they planned to be married in January.

Nice Hits Burial Of Constitution By New Dealists

Baltimore Business Men Hear Attack on U. S. 'Waste, Revolution.'

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 26.—Gov. Harry W. Nice told the Baltimore Junior Association of Commerce today that "it is not necessary to bury the Constitution and liberty" with the corpse of the depression.

"All the remedy we require," he said in a broadcast address, "is an earnest and impartial administration of the just and equal laws contemplated and prescribed by our constitutional systems and, in the unyielding spirit of those laws, an unpurchased and unpurchaseable administration of our Federal and State governments."

Nice, mentioned in some quarters as a possible candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, rapped many acts of the Administration as unnecessary and asserted the "overshadowing issue" now is the "series of headlong measures which their official authors are pleased to call the New Deal."

He advised the people to hold the Administration directly responsible for "the illegality and unconstitutionality of every measure they enact or advocate which threatens our free country and Constitution."

Criticizing the Administration's financial policies, Nice said it apparently believed that "a nation can spend, dissipate, waste and squander itself into prosperity."

Praising the Supreme Court's decision invalidating NRA, the Governor asserted other agencies of the Roosevelt Administration "are not only features of the endless saturnalia of extravagance, expenditure and waste, but are active agencies of the socialist revolution now in progress."

Legion Urges A Bonus Cash, Hits Inflation

voted approval of the bonus demand.

The adopted resolution asked for immediate cash payment of adjusted compensation on certificates, cancellation of accrued interest and refund of interest paid. The controversial section, subject of the debate, read:

"We request the immediate favorable action of the Congress, and the approval of the President of the United States, upon the clear-cut and single issue, without having it complicated or confused with other issues of Government finance or theories of currency with which the legion does not intend to become involved.

The bonus stand completed a well defined, broad legion program for 1935-36.

In action at previous sessions of the four-day convention, the organization voted vigorous opposition to Communism, including a demand for withdrawal of United States recognition of Soviet Russia; asked Congress to carry forward and extend measures for more adequate national defense and commended the Government for its efforts to collect outstanding war debts, "Without further extension or reduction."

Its program outlined for the year, the delegates chose the men to carry it into effect as the final order of business of the convention. Burly and broad-shouldered Murphy, Iowa State insurance commissioner, was named to head the organization in succession to Belgrano, the dapper Californian.

Wins Over Rivals.

Murphy won on the second ballot over five opposing candidates—Harry W. Colmery, of Topeka, Kans.; Maurice Devine, Manchester, N. H.; Frank D. Nash, Louisville, Ky.; Vilas H. Whaley, Racine, Wis., and Earl U. Cliff, Ortonville, Minn.

Then the delegates named Raymond A. Gates, of Virginia; W. E. Whitelock, of South Carolina; Whitney F. Godwin, of Florida; Oscar Worthwine, of Idaho, and Lou Probst, of Wyoming, as national vice commanders.

Unsuccessful candidates were Leonard Sisk, of Tennessee; James Mahaffey, of Hawaii; James Turner, of Wyoming, and John F. McNulty, of Connecticut.

The Rev. Thomas D. Kennedy, of St. Louis, was elected national chaplain.

In an impressive flag ceremony that preceded the final adjournment Edgar Dunlop, of Georgia, presented the United States and legion colors to retiring Commander Belgrano, and United States Senator Bennett C. Clark, of Missouri, made the presentation to Murphy. Senator Clark was the legion's first national commander.

Foreign Exchange.

Principal foreign monies again weakened in relation to the dollar in world exchange dealings yesterday, according to the Associated Press.

The pound sterling was ¼ of a point lower in New York at $4.91¾. In the earlier market trend in London the dollar eased to 4.92¼ to the pound.

French francs, at 6.59¼ cents in American trading, were off .00⅝ of a cent, while before the New York opening, dollars had improved slightly at the equivalent of 6.592 cents to the franc in Paris.

Guilders dipped .03 of a cent in New York at 67.52 cents. Swiss francs were .02 of a cent down at 32.49 cents, and the lira was unchanged at 8.15½ cents.

Based on the closing rate for the French franc in the American market the dollar was valued at a premium of 64-100 of 1 per cent, compared with 58-100 Wednesday and 14-100 a month ago.

Great Britain Rejects French Alliance Plea

Any European Emergency Must Be Met as It Occurs, Laval Informed.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

London, Sept. 26.—Britain tonight refused to give France advance assurance of military support against Germany or any other possible European aggressor.

The statement was made in reply to French inquiries as to whether the British attitude on sanctions, expressed by Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare on the Ethiopian situation, would apply to a continental European emergency.

The foreign office handed a note to French Ambassador Andrew Corbin which emphasized that Britain's attitude generally favored collective action against an aggressor but that theoretical future situations must be met when they arise.

Laval Hesitates to Sacrifice.

France's query was understood to have been preliminary to a decision on whether to join Britain in support of sanctions against Italy if Ethiopia is attacked. Premier Pierre Laval, seeking to preserve both the league and Franco-Italian amity, hesitated to sacrifice the latter without specific assurance that Britain would back her in the event of a German attack.

The note stressed and amplified several passages from Sir Samuel's Geneva address of particular interest to France, but avoided all commitment on hypothetical cases.

The British reply was seen by diplomats as complicating France's position on sanctions. Laval probably will hesitate to sacrifice Italy's support against Germany, pledged at Stresa, in the face of Britain's noncommital attitude, unless some assurance has been passed informally which is sufficiently convincing to France.

Anglo-German Pact Cited.

The recently negotiated Anglo-German naval accord may have modified Britain's position, making specific assurances impossible.

The note will be published next week.

Italian Ambassador Dino Grandi visited the foreign office this morning but the call was explained as merely to thank Sir Robert Van Sittart, permanent undersecretary, for condolences expressed over the death of Grandi's father.

The undertone of the stock market improved sharply today on news that the League Council had voted to apply Article XV to Italy.

Dawes Claims Fear Has Gone, Ending Slump

Return of Mass Confidence Prevents Relapse, He Tells Chicago.

lescence takes on a regular pattern, the speaker said, "unless interrupted by war or similar elemental mass action."

He said he was enabled to predict last December that recovery would set in this summer by a close comparison of the courses of the depressions of 1873 and 1893.

Disregarding the widely varying theories of economists as to the actual start of those depressions, Gen. Dawes proceeded under the assumption that "a major depression starts when the ordinary business reckons it."

Duration 5 Years, 9 Months.

This gave him the dates September 18, 1873; May 4, 1893, and October 29, 1929.

Using the market course of heavy, durable goods, a major business index, he found each lasted a period of approximately five years and nine months, the variations being less than 30 days.

Then superimposing charts for the previous depressions on a chart for the last, the speaker said he was able to make his definite prophecy last December.

"When economists of the standing of Sir Josiah Stamp and Dr. Moritz Bonn tell me they have not seen this particular method used, we may safely assume it has never been used before," Gen. Dawes said.

"As a result of what I found, giving the simple reason therefor, based on human nature, I predicted in my last address before you December 12, 1934, the sudden sustained rise in the demand for durable goods in June or July of this present year, which started in steel ingots, contra-seasonally, on July 5, 1935, and still continues."

Stock Market Verifies.

"I made this definite prediction in order to call that general public attention which definiteness in prediction and fulfillment alone would inspire to what I consider a new and useful method of investigation."

"At that time I had not prepared by the same method the new and significant stock market chart which I now present with its equally interesting and corroborative indications."

His stock market and durable goods charts for the three depressions, Dawes said, showed:

"1. That the last three major depressions in the United States registered the approach of the final year of business recovery (from the panic) in a sustained rise in stock exchange prices, lasting in no case less than six months, in an interval of time approximately five years and six months, the maximum variation being within 30 days.

Steel Ingots Mark Turn.

"2. That in each case, approximately 90 days after the commencement of this sustained rise in stock exchange prices, to-wit, five years and nine months after the initial stock crash, they registered the start of the sustained rapid advance in the prices of pig iron, which was the beginning of the recovery in the two former depressions, and in this depression (in which throughout steel prices were stabilized at a high level), the start of the sustained increase in the production of steel ingots marking the beginning of recovery.

"3. That at some time in these depressions thus charted and measured—approximately at the same time—mass confidence was restored quite suddenly just as at their beginning it was destroyed.

"4. That mass confidence in a major depression, once regained, is not subject to frequent oscillations, as has been generally claimed currently by unquiet minds; but thus regained, its continued existence, unless interrupted by war or similar elemental mass action, thereafter brings about a natural course of recovery in a definite time.

"5. That the sudden loss of mass confidence should be considered the specific cause of the following extreme dislocation of normal general business and credit functioning."

Gold Policy Discounted.

The general took a few indirect shots at his critics.

"It is a fair conclusion," he said, "that this or that governmental policy is to be taken with due allowance" for any possible effect in the alleviation of a depression.

Citing devaluation of the dollar as an example, the speaker indicated he believed it had no more effect than appreciation of the dollar had during the depression of 1873 or the "don't touch the dollar" policy in the depression of 1893. Some economic writers have credited the current gold policy with speeding recovery.

"Let me say here," he warned, however, "that the above does not relate to the longer time effects of governmental policy in creating or destroying mass confidence.

"A present menace confronts a restored confidence and prosperity of the American people in the governmental budgetary deficit created largely by the expenditure of borrowed money."

The general said he believed many commentators on economic trends failed in trying to answer the question, "When will this depression end?" because they were concerned not so much with its similarities as to its differences with previous depressions.

The speaker said he believed the investigation he had carried out could be extended and possibly applied to individual businesses with profitable result to their operators.

His address was prepared for delivery before a joint meeting of the Chicago Association of Commerce, which heard his original prediction, and the Illinois Manufacturers Association at the Stevens Hotel.

Coal Production Up.

New York, Sept. 26.—The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended September 21 at approximately 7,620,000 net tons, against 6,864,000 tons in the like week of 1934. The previous week's output, as reported by the Bureau of Mines, was 8,355,000 tons.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Candid Camera Shots.

Hollywood, Sept. 28.

ALICE FAYE always seems as if she is on her way to a night club—and she generally is . . . John Gilbert is still a big lover in Hollywood, although he isn't on the screen . . . Topical gags are seldom used in flickers. The situation can change completely before the picture is released. The line can be eliminated from a show, but not from the celluloid . . . This is also why the lyric, "You're the Top," was rewritten, but there are still many current remarks in it . . . Jack Oakie now serves tea in his dressing room—but tea.

• • • •

Many scenario writers spend more time trying to get their names on the credit slide on the screen than they do trying to write a good scenario . . . Hollywood judges the scenarists by their amount of credits. Although some of them may be discredits . . . yet, at a preview, no scenario writer is asked for his autograph. It's Clark Gable and Marlene Dietrich that the fans mob . . . They don't even want the writers to write their names.

• • • •

CLAUDETTE COLBERT seldom wears high heels. Even when wearing an evening gown. This applies only to her attire when working in a flicker, and you can't see her feet . . . Mae West, who doesn't smoke off the screen, smokes cigarettes in "Klondike Lou." And she seems very pleased to toss the ciggie away right after the take . . . Frances Langford is as soothing on the set as her songs are in a flicker . . . Rochelle Hudson has a small bed in her portable dressing room instead of the customary couch.

Eddie Cantor's five flickers, made for Sam Goldwyn, have grossed about $11,800,000, making Eddie one of the biggest box office draws . . . In fact, picture for picture, Charlie Chaplin is the only one who tops him. Chaplin gets more at the box office than any other star. A four or five million dollar gross is expected for "Modern Times" . . . Grace Moore's "One Night of Love" has just reached the $2,000,000 class . . . If all the flickers reported to be breaking records are actually doing it, some of those theaters must have rubber walls.

• • • •

THERE aren't any genuine high apartment houses in Hollywood. The highest is the Sunset Towers . . . The Sunset Towers stands on a hill, and when you enter the foyer you are on the fourth floor . . . Having a house guest is almost a vocation in Hollywood . . . When anyone goes to New York he registers at a hotel. When any one goes to the cinema town, he immediately looks up a friend and becomes a house guest . . . Donald Ogden Stewart once had so many house guests that there was practically no room for him. Besides, he didn't like the company, and got on a train for New York.

• • • •

Herb Nacio Brown, who wrote the tune of "You Are My Lucky Star," was a tailor, and Arthur Freed, who did the lyrics, was with Gus Edwards . . . Harry Warren, who wrote the tune of "The Rose in Her Hair," used to play a piano in a saloon, and Al Dubin, who did the lyrics, was a bartender . . . Jerome Kern and George Gershwin used to play the piano at rehearsals of musical shows . . . Dorothy Fields, who did the lyrics of "I'm in the Mood for Love," was a French teacher, and Jimmy McHugh, who wrote the tune, was a plumber.

THE autograph seekers have a new stunt. They rush up to a star coming out of a restaurant or a theater and hand the performer a picture of himself or herself to autograph. The star is bewildered by the fact that the autograph seeker has his or her photo . . . The new racket is to write to the film exchange, asking for the photos. The autograph seeker carries a book filled with pictures of the foremost stars and pulls out only the photo of the star he rushes up to, making that performer believe his or her autograph is the only one desired . . . It was a cute remark that Fred Allen made to an autograph seeker, who asked him to sign his picture. Allen said: "Wait until it is released and they'll probably be only too glad to send it to you."

Eleanor Powell got the same salary for making "The Broadway Melody" as she is getting in "At Home Abroad"—$750 a week . . . It's very amusing to read about the people who discovered Powell and Fred Astaire. As if they hadn't done anything in show business before . . . Was going to do a column just listing the various people who insist that they discovered Eleanor Powell, and conclude it by saying: "To be continued tomorrow" . . . Metro didn't fully realize what a great box office title they had in "The Broadway Melody," and wanted to call the flicker "Broadway Rhythm" . . . Gene Fowler looks up words in the telephone book instead of the dictionary.

It will be our greatest gesture of appreciation to you—the Washington that grew with us, and helped us grow. From a one-room "Drygoods Only," you've built us up to this efficient modern store, with 75 separate selling departments. You've replaced our single delivery cart with a fleet of 25 busy trucks. You've encouraged us, from the time we trimmed two kerosene lamps to light our wares, till today when immense air-conditioners are being installed. From two clerks, you've raised us to a giant organization, in which your telephone orders alone require a special switchboard that can accommodate 18 operators.

For 75 years you've given us your loyalty, your patronage

The Hour Has Struck.

The Council of the League of Nations has taken the most far-reaching step yet attempted in the history of international action. It has, by unanimous vote of all members, excepting Italy, served notice on that country that invasion of Ethiopia would unquestionably be regarded as a violation of the League Covenant.

This action, taken at Geneva yesterday, illustrates the progress which League procedure has made since the Sino-Japanese dispute. At that time Japan successfully resisted the application of Article 15 of the Covenant—the article which leads most easily to the application of sanctions against an aggressor state—until a fait accompli had been established in Manchuria. In the present instance Article 15, with all its incalculable consequences, has been invoked by the Council before an act of aggression has been committed.

The essence of this article is that it permits the taking of certain definite measures over the active opposition of the parties to an international dispute. Not merely is "a full investigation" of the dispute made mandatory, but publication of a report on the dispute, with recommendations, becomes obligatory. Finally, flagrant disregard of the League's recommendations under this article makes the delinquent state liable to the automatic sanctions provisions of Article 16.

Because of the great potentialities of this article its unanimous invocation by the Council was until the last minute in doubt. It was anticipated that Argentina, because of its traditional sympathies with Italy, might hesitate to take this step. And it was further believed that France would seek to avoid an action aligning that country so clearly against the course of Italian policy. The fact that unanimity has now been achieved indicates that during the past few days assurances of a nature calculated to quiet doubts have been passed among the delegates at Geneva. Concretely, the outcome indicates that Great Britain has promised France to take the same position toward Germany, if it should later be necessary, as France is now prepared to take against Italy.

The fatal hour of decision has now struck for Mussolini. He knows that if he proceeds to solve the dispute with Ethiopia by force rather than by agreement, he will face the united opposition of nearly 60 nations. Nor will Il Duce be able to say, should he depress the scales for war, that full notice of what may be involved in his decision was not given him in advance.

Facing the Italian dictator now is one of the most momentous decisions of all recorded history. Without evasion or equivocation the League of Nations has done its full duty in helping him to make a choice which will save his country, himself, and the future of world peace.

Excessive Vigilance.

It is well said that the success of democratic government hinges upon the eternal vigilance of the people. Fear of pillory at the hands of constituents, or more often of political opponents, accounts to a large extent for honest and efficient administration in local government. But when so intricate an office as that of tax collector comes up for inspection, impulses to criticize should be carefully controlled. For charges of irregularity in the collection and safekeeping of public funds, no matter how unfounded, can give rise to misapprehensions of serious import.

Such charges have recently been raised in nearby Montgomery County. To add to the delicacy of the situation, taxes on real estate in the county underwent a sizable increase not long ago. Tax bills on property show a sharp advance. Under those circumstances it does not ease the taxpayer's mind to hear talk of mismanagement in his tax collector's office.

It now appears that the charges were lacking in effective basis. At least, the grand jury, after a two-day investigation, has decided to disregard the allegations and the matter apparently is closed. The county treasurer is naturally persuaded that the entire affair can be explained as a political plot. Inasmuch as he is soon required to apply for a new bond and since rumors of his maladministration would count against him in the eyes of a bonding company, he reasons that the charges were concocted by his political opponents in an effort to disqualify him for office.

If this is so, if the public's confidence has been shaken without justification in order to advance political fortunes, the incident is likely to prove a boomerang.

Reversion To Laissez Faire?

Three years ago the Brookings Institution began a study of the distribution of wealth and income in relation to economic progress. The first book of the series discussed "America's Capacity to Produce." The second undertook to measure "America's Capacity to Consume;" the third, dealt with "The Formation of Capital." The fourth and final volume, entitled "Income and Economic Progress," is now off the press. It attempts to define a national policy which, it is believed, offers the greatest promise of furthering prosperity.

Those who have awaited the verdict of the investigators, expecting some new plan for solving our economic problems to be evolved, will be sadly disappointed. Dr. Harold G. Moulton, after summing up the results of the inquiry, concludes that the best way to raise our standard of living and promote maximum progress is to reduce prices, gradually but persistently, "so as to pass on the benefits of technological progress and rising productivity to all the population in the role of consumers." In short, if President Roosevelt had asked advice from the economists connected with Brookings Institution, instead of addressing an appeal to the clergy, he would presumably have been urged to abandon all efforts to "stabilize" or raise prices by restricting output, or by relying upon any other device for protecting the price structure.

While the Brookings study does not in plain words advocate a return to the system of free competition, it does so by implication when it openly attacks policies which tend to "freeze" prices. Thus the pools, cartels, monopolies, and trade associations which have become increasingly numerous and powerful during the last half century are described as "dangerously short-sighted." Consequently, the New Deal experiments in price control which accentuate and accelerate the trend away from a system of free competition are necessarily discarded as inimical to progress, judged from a long-time point of view.

The theoretical arguments advanced against price-fixing in any of its innumerable forms are unquestionably very strong, especially in view of the evidence supplied by the inquiries into the country's capacity to produce and to consume. The charge that industry is overdeveloped has been convincingly disproved. It has also been shown that the unsatisfied needs of the American people would more than absorb the output of our productive establishments and still leave many opportunities open for further expansion. Our failure to utilize productive equipment fully is attributed primarily to the inability of consumers to take off the market what has been produced. That in turn is traced to the faulty distribution of money incomes, reflected in excessive concentration of purchasing power in the hands of a small proportion of the people. The result is that the surplus income of the latter group, directed into investment channels, fails to find profitable employment because of the limited ability of the consuming masses to buy what they need or desire.

Assuming, then, that our economic difficulties are largely caused by a faulty system of distribution, the Brookings Institution proceeds to examine and discard various plans for reforming it. Restriction of output, except in special emergencies, is condemned as leading to impoverishment. "Share the wealth" plans are impracticable, while equalization of incomes would not only encounter insuperable political obstacles, but would yield very little additional gain per person. There are also distinct limits to the use of taxation to correct inequalities and raise living standards. Advances in wage rates in accordance with NRA policies result in a rise in prices and living costs which offsets monetary gains. Furthermore, general wage increases necessitate other adjustments and create instability in the economic structure.

By a process of elimination, therefore, the conclusion is reached that the country needs lower prices, made possible by reduced costs. These lower prices would increase the effective purchasing power of the consuming masses and at the same time encourage an expansion of production. Obviously, free competition guarantees the conditions essential to the working out of such a program. If there are alternative means of attaining the same end, the Brookings Institution fails to mention them.

Undoubtedly these experts realize that in the modern world, controlled production and industrial regulation have reached a point which precludes a whole-hearted return to the old system of laissez faire. Nevertheless, their emphasis upon the superior advantages of a system of fluctuating prices is a significant reversion to discarded theories and practices. President Roosevelt would do well to take notice of it while he is seeking enlightenment concerning the public attitude toward his policies.

Bonds And Tooth Paste.

The coupon clippers must have been agreeably surprised when they discovered this week that they may now snip out the corner of a magazine page, mail it to the Treasury with their check or money order, and obtain a nice, safe, profitable Government bond. It is as simple as ordering a 50-cent football, a bottle of hair tonic or the first lesson from a correspondence school. Just sign on the dotted line, and you can get a $25 bond for $18.75.

Advertising is a proper and effective means of selling merchandise and services to the public. The Treasury certainly does not enhance its prestige, however, by thus competing with the manufacturers of cigarettes, automobile tires, tooth paste, soda pop, etc., for the purchaser's dollar. In trying to induce the public to buy Federal bonds "as a means to provide for any future need of yourself or your family" the Government really advertises the failure of its venture of issuing "baby bonds" at popular prices.

Especially is this high pressure salesmanship distasteful when based on misleading statements. If Treasury issues were subject to regulation, as private corporation issues are, that department might not be permitted to sell its bonds under the pretense that "their value is fixed" and they are therefore "free from fluctuation or depreciation." As a matter of fact, the value of Government bonds varies in response to numerous influences. Confidence in their "freedom from depreciation" has certainly not been strengthened by the Administration's deliberate repudiation of the gold clause.

Subsidizing Strikes.

The coal strike has temporarily added about as many men to the ranks of the unemployed as Relief Administrator Hopkins has so far been able to place upon the pay rolls of the WPA. Within a few days, if the strike continues, this army of 400,000 idle miners and their families will be feeling the pinch of unemployment. The United Mine Workers are not planning to pay strike benefits. Local communities and States obviously cannot take on additional relief burdens of this character. Consequently, representatives of the miners have turned to the Federal Government, seeking assurances that aid will be forthcoming, when and if needed.

Mr. Hopkins is reported to have said that miners and their families would be cared for if the strike continues long enough to produce real distress. Other unnamed spokesmen for the Federal relief agencies state that relief will be granted if the National Labor Relations Board should decide that the strike is "justified." This latter policy of making relief payments contingent upon the justice of the strikers' demands has been referred to as the "usual policy" or the policy laid down by the Administration for guidance in previous disputes. The fact is that no policy in this question of subsidizing strikes has ever been clearly formulated, though it is high time for taking a clear-cut position.

If the Federal Government is called upon to save strikers and their dependents from starving, the compelling reason for intervention must be relief of human suffering, not any decision by a semi-judicial administrative agency concerning the merits of the strikers' claims. The Labor Relations Board would place itself in an impossible position if it sought to pass hasty judgment upon the questions at issue under conditions that virtually preclude cool and unbiased decisions.

The broad responsibilities assumed by the Federal Government for aiding the destitute, whatever the causes of distress, make it especially imperative to devise peaceable methods of settling industrial disputes. The Guffey act was supposed to provide helpful machinery for arbitrating industrial disputes in the coal industry. Yet the United Mine Workers completely ignored the chance to test procedure which they devised in their own behalf, and at the same time they expect the Government to give indirect support to their attempt to win their case by coercion. With firmness, and with a definite labor policy to guide it, the Administration need not have been placed in this embarrassing position. Now it is called upon to make clear whether the intention in future is to support those who choose to flaunt its machinery of industrial conciliation.

The Forgotten Outline.

Since President Roosevelt has almost completed allocation of the $4,000,000,000 work relief fund, it is interesting to note the deviations from the rough outline of expenditures furnished by Congress. With some notable exceptions, such as the CCC, it is doubtful whether Congress would recognize the current job-making "program" as a result of its handiwork.

Congress suggested expenditure of $450,000,000 for housing; actually that fund has been reduced to $100,000,000. Rural electrification, for which Congress earmarked $100,000,000, is now apparently to be financed by the RFC. Grade-crossing elimination, included with streets and highways in a category for which $800,000,000 was suggested by Congress, was virtually eliminated from the program several weeks ago. The fate of the Rural Resettlement Administration is still uncertain.

A limit of $900,000,000 was fixed upon loans and grants for non-Federal projects. As outlined in the law this is the largest category of projects authorized. But the President's final allotment to the PWA for this purpose brings the total fund available for State and local undertakings to little more than $300,000,000. Secretary Ickes was compelled to choose from an imposing list of projects only those which can be built in short order with meager outlays for materials and skilled labor. The bulk of the money clearly intended for this type of improvement will be diverted to WPA boondoggling.

No exact figures showing the allocations for each category designated by the law are available, but the general trend is unmistakable. Major improvements have been largely ruled out. Made work, such as park puttering, futile research by inexpert "white collar" workers and trifling repair jobs, will absorb most of the $4,000,000,000 fund. If this farcical performance could have been visualized by Congress, there are many reasons to believe that the gigantic work-relief appropriation would never have been made.

Trackless Locomotives.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Two-way roads are certainly an abomination, as A. B. Little has pointed out, and I hope it will be our children and not our great-grandchildren who will look back with amazement at our stupidity in permitting them to exist as long as we have.

We are still living in the "horse and buggy age" in that we have not come to a full realization that the automobile should be dealt with not as a horseless carriage, but as a trackless locomotive.

With our main automobile routes falling so far short of modern engineering standards and built with so little regard for the destructive potentialities of the automobile, we might well question the wisdom of spending huge sums of money on skyline drives, the maintenance of which will be a heavy burden on future generations. But in this matter, as in many others, those most concerned, motorists and taxpayers, have little voice.

Better Bus Service.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One would hardly deny that the transportation problem in this city is unique; that the large percentage of Government employes who use the transportation system make it so—for the most part. And, that it is their tokens which make the company prosperous—again largely.

Since the rank and file of citizens pay, it is for them to say whether or not the service of the transportation company is sufficient for their needs at the very critical times when they must use the trolleys and buses.

No one wants to deny that the buses are an improvement, with their noise abatement and speed capacity, and to the rather fortunate person who does not have to use them at the crowded hours, their substitution for the somewhat antiquated trolleys can be recommended highly.

Notwithstanding these good features, but in spite of them, to the twice-daily patron who is forced to stand, say, during the entire ride from Calvert street (with transfers) to the Willard Hotel, and farther down Fourteenth street, they are not quite so delightful. To those who have stood on Connecticut avenue around 5 p. m. seeking transportation to Chevy Chase, and been passed by half a dozen or more buses, displaying "Full" signs, these conditions are not good. And finally the transportation from upper Connecticut avenue to the "Bureau" cars is far from satisfactory. The crowded Connecticut avenue and R street bus only connects with a crowded "Bureau" car at Connecticut and R, and the unfortunate passenger boarding this car usually stands during the remainder of the trip to the "Bureau."

Better service should be demanded by those who "pay."

On Teaching Communism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While admiring the attitude which our corporation counsel has usually taken on District affairs, and gladly recognizing his ability, I think he slips a cog in his reasoning concerning the teaching or discussing of communism in the presence of our public school pupils. Mr. Prettyman's idea can be appreciated, in that he would not place inhibitions on any teacher who, in the course of his classwork, considered it his duty to explain what communism is, or is not.

But that course had better be left to the teacher's discretion without so much as suggesting references to communism any more than to birth control or other subjects which occasion differences in opinion too radical for the classroom. Communism is an insidious thing, seeking every open door for entrance; once let it be said that a teacher in a public school may discuss it so as to explain it and opportunity is at once given for an advocate of communism to place the subject in its best light, under cover of merely explaining it.

For much the same reason, the Bible is not used in our schools, since an advocate of a certain tenet or interpretation can so read the Bible to the ill-instructed as to teach what has been forbidden to teach. Let me read the Bible to one who knows little about it and I could read it in such a way as to make it confirm my own interpretation of it, or my own denominational preferences. I fully agree with Senator King, that communism had better be left out of classroom discussion, at least for the present.

No Lover Of Burlesque.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On Ninth street, between G street and Pennsylvania avenue, in the lobby of a certain theater—not a picture house—is a collection of the most indecent, vulgar and obscene photos and crude paintings I have ever beheld.

The police pass there many times every day.

There is a law against the sale of indecent, obscene and vulgar magazines; it is enforced, but this "art gallery" of suggestive indecency is allowed to stand. Small children do not read the prohibited magazines, but they do stand and gaze at these pictures. Who knows what thoughts are born in their minds while they look.

The law is truly a great thing. If one wants to drink a glass of beer, he or she must be seated. It is a crime against public morals and decency to drink it standing up. "Consistency, thou art a jewel."

I am told that there is a place upstairs over this "art gallery" called "The hottest place in town," and if one may judge by the exhibition in the lobby, I have no doubt but what it is. I have never been there—the painted show is enough.

DECENCY.

In Praise Of Motormen.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would like to give a few words of praise to the motormen and conductors who ran the street cars from Chevy Chase Lake to Kensington.

I watched the first trip, which I think was about 38 years ago, and I heard the last trip on September 14. I have used the cars all these years and could name all the men who ran them. They were all courteous gentlemen.

No accident ever occurred, even though the car track was used by many school children as the short cut to the school, so in your good paper will you please give a word of thanks to the former motormen and conductors of the Kensington railway from one who has watched them all these years.

An Economic Constitution?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We celebrated Constitution Day last week, and made it the occasion for expressing considerable difference of opinion. It might be suggested that there is no better way to honor the framers of the Constitution than to follow their example.

In their day, they recognized that there was a political crisis. There were 13 separate States, with conflicting interests, afraid of each other, becoming more and more jealous and antagonistic. They met the crisis by calling together a convention of the ones best able to meet the situation; this convention sat behind closed doors (unhampered by lobbyists and blocs) for several months, and carefully worked up a definite related plan, as an architect plans a building, whereby these States could work together in reasonable harmony, recognizing their mutual needs and interdependence. The plan was then submitted for ratification.

Today, we recognize an economic crisis. We have groups representing conflicting interests, afraid of each other, jealous, antagonistic. Yet between them there is that interdependence that makes antagonism foolish and destructive. State boundary lines have little to do with the present trouble. Instead, it is the maladjustment between production and use, the problem of the too much and the too little.

Various well-sounding partial remedies are suggested. But so far our efforts have been unrelated experiments.

To follow the example of our forefathers; then, we should provide a legal means for calling a convention to study the disease, and prescribe a carefully planned remedy. It is not a one-man job. Let the members be selected from among those who have made a specialty of economics, for instance, 20 or 30 of our leading economists, or heads of the departments of economics in our leading universities, and to them have the task assigned of carefully framing an economic plan that will fit our needs, and fulfill those high purposes of our Constitution—"to establish justice, to secure the blessings of liberty."

Let them use any planks deemed desirable out of the various platforms of any political party, or the ideas of any "American Messiah," or good suggestions or plans wherever they may be found, and from these and their own experience or study, work out a plan that will fit America's crying need for a more equitable social system.

Let the plan in its entirety be submitted for adoption, and see if we cannot have something reasonably satisfactory, stable and equitable, which will give a fair chance to all.

It is not in the realm of the impossible. In view of all the advancement that the human race has made in mechanical and scientific lines, it would be a pitiful attitude to deny that the human mind is capable of developing a fair economic system. C. L. WOOLSEY.

The Post Impressionist

Latin-American Conspiracy.

Post Office, Friday.

ONCE again we insist that no diplomatic correspondence should be interpreted in a single reading.

On Wednesday we published a serious survey of the messages sent by the present President of the United States to the presidents of five Spanish-American republics on their joint Independence Day. Now this international incident has entered a new stage. It requires just a careful study as the stage preceding.

We narrated our first fears that President Franklin Roosevelt's messages, though delicately constructed, might create a suspicion of partiality on the part of the White House. But then we also presented an analysis calculated to demonstrate that the recipients could have no just cause for seeking any "most favored nation" policy in the documents.

* * *

Well, since our analysis was made, the replies of the five nations have reached a certain address on Pennsylvania avenue. We have been privileged to see them—and, we repeat, we are compelled to admit that they also demand scrupulous examination.

* * *

They certainly hint that there is a conspiracy down there, south of Mexico: a Five Power conspiracy of which the object is our own United States.

* * *

Despite variations in phraseology, it looks as if those Central American presidents had got together and agreed upon a common policy toward Washington. To be sure, there are conspiracies for help as well as for harm, and, equally to be sure, this conspiracy belongs to the former category. But a casual glance at the messages distinctly catches collusion.

* * *

To pass, however, to the results of our second look. Although it will confirm the suspicion that the five communications are one in kind, it will also demonstrate deep differences of degree.

In order to be absolutely impartial, we print the documents in the mounting order of their fervor.

"In the name of the Guatemalan people and in my own, I sincerely thank Your Excellency for the good wishes which, in your kind message of today, you were good enough to express to me on the occasion of the anniversary of Guatemala's independence. "JORGE UBICO."

* * *

"In the name of the people and government of Honduras, I take pleasure in expressing to Your Excellency sincere thanks for kind congratulations on the occasion of the anniversary of the independence of this country.

"TIBURCIO CARIAS A."

Guatemala's Chief Executive "sincerely thanks." But Honduras' "takes pleasure."

President Martinez of El Salvador telegraphs:

"I greatly appreciate Your Excellency's cordial congratulations on the occasion of the anniversary of our national independence and the good wishes which you have expressed for the constant prosperity of this Republic."

* * *

President Ricardo Jiminez of Costa Rica wires:

"I thank Your Excellency from the heart for your cordial felicitations on the occasion of this national anniversary, and I wish to express sincere good wishes for the prosperity of your great nation and for Your Excellency's personal happiness."

* * *

Here is progress from great appreciation, which may be a merely mental movement, to what is avowedly a genuine cardiac emotion.

And then comes the best of all: the telegram of the President of Nicaragua, Juan B. Sacasa. He starts out calmly enough with an "I warmly thank you." But who is included in those thanks? And what follows?

"I warmly thank Your Excellency and your great and friendly people for your cordial felicitations on the occasion of the anniversary of the independence of Nicaragua. At the same time, I wish to express my sincere good wishes for the growing prosperity of the United States."

Yes, sir; there may be a Central American conspiracy of fraternity toward these United States. But some of the conspirators are even more fraternal than the others.

* * *

Why, we no sooner realized just how inclusive that message of Senor Sacasa really was than a reply was speeding to its author:

"El Presidente, Managua:

"Deeply grateful because of Your Excellency's consideration for even this country's Forgotten Man. The prosperity you mention as growing has not yet reached an observable height in the undersigned's back yard. In fact, he hasn't any back yard for it to grow in, any more. But, now that the project has your backing, he awaits developments confidently and hopes from his heart that similar developments will occur among the great and friendly people of Nicaragua.

"THE POST-IMPRESSIONIST."

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Prizefighter's Example.

New York, Sept. 26.

THERE is great astonishment over the calm reserve of Joe Louis, the sulphur-colored Negro athlete who does his work without unnecessary conversation or lost motion, minds his own business and flops asleep on the instant when he has nothing else to do. He answers questions "Yes" or "No," and one of the most puzzling tasks that any interviewer ever tried was that of Clem McCarthy, the horse-park orator, who undertook to engage him in general conversation on the air a few days before the revival of the Million-Dollar Gate and the Era of Wonderful Nonsense. Mr. McCarthy, a professional chatterbox, swung out into space, soared, spun, swooped, turned over on his back and nestled down to a fluffy conversational landing, just by way of asking the colored boy how he felt.

"Fine," said Joe Louis.

Again and again Mr. McCarthy took off, on longer and longer flights to use up his time, hoping to tempt his subject into a flow of conversation, but all Joe Louis had to say was accomplished in a few syllables. They were sensible answers, to the point, brief and sufficient, like the punches with which he chopped down Max Baer in the ring. Having covered the ground, he said no more, and this put it up to Mr. McCarthy to provide the persiflage, the store laugh and all the jovial embroidery which constitutes conversation not only on the radio but in the routine relations of people. It was an anxious ten minutes for Mr. McCarthy, as one could detect, but as the interview progressed it became a sort of lesson in efficiency, prudence and good sense.

• • • •

OF course, Mr. McCarthy is a pro, and reticense in a radio man is not to be expected, but Joe Louis, by contrast, was calling attention to the utter uselessness, and worse, of most of the wordage that falls from the lips of human beings. People were given speech to express themselves to one another, but by the abuse of that gift start fights and feuds, disrupt friendships, provoke riots and bore one another to exhaustion.

Joe Louis is happily free of the risks which lie in the tactless jest, idle gossip about his friends or total strangers and the one word which leads to another and finally to plate-throwing and divorce. His betters may sit in the cocktail bar or lean on the back fence slitting the throats of mutual friends with confidential "Understand, I like him, but's"—and live to regret overspeaking, but Louis will not. True, he will never come to be known as one of the wits of his time, although, for a fact, he does compress an amazing amount of meaning and even some humor into the tiny capsules of his short answers. But, on the other hand, most wits are overrated and rely on cruelty to earn their reputations and their cheap, momentary applause.

• • • •

A CONGRESS whose entire membership were blessed with the same economy of words and the safe wise selection could go through a long session in a single day without loss of effectiveness, and the Congressional Record of the entire sitting could be engraved with a railroad spike on the head of a pin, if desirable.

Political campaigns, by the same rule, could be fought out on the material issues to the exclusion of personal hatred and other confusing emotions which prevent the expression of a sane verdict, and the whole world would be much better off if words were used only for legitimate purposes as sparingly as possible and at the right time.

Yet useless, idle, stupid conversation is so much the habit of the human breed that people are amazed at the phenomenon of a colored boy, pitched into prominence, who uses just enough speech to express himself beyond any possibility of misunderstanding and, having done so, shuts up.

• • • •

IN action, too, as well as in conversation, the Louis boy knows precisely what he wants to do and how to do it. Then he does it and is through. More flashy or stylish prizefighters twirl on their toes, squat, crouch, flail the air with meaningless feints and potshots. But Louis uses his hands only for punching, never wasting a stroke or even as much as a twitch of a glove, and in both his fights in New York each blow took a perceptible toll of his opponent's strength until finally the big one brought the critter tumbling down. It would have to be a great nation in which every citizen was as good at his line of work and the government as effective as Joe Louis is at his and people with nothing to say could say it in less than a thousand words.

I am acutely self-conscious at this point, feeling that all this could have been pointed out in much less wordage.

Biblical Accuracy

By William Lyon Phelps

HERE is a new book that ought to interest nearly everybody. It is called "The Accuracy of the Bible," and is written in English by Prof. A. S. Yahuda.

Who is Dr. Yahuda? Abraham Shalom Ezekiel Yahuda was born in Jerusalem in 1877; he was educated at the University of Heidelberg and Strassburg, where he took the degree of Ph.D. He was professor of Hebrew first at Berlin and later at Madrid Universities. He has published many works, some in German, some in Spanish, some in English; and at present he lives in London. He believes that Biblical scholars should not only know Hebrew and the kindred Semitic languages, but the "languages and cultures of the neighboring countries and peoples of Israel, a necessity which is not yet sufficiently realized by Old Testament scholars."

Thus by his knowledge of Egyptian, he is able to throw much new light on the stories of the books of Genesis, Exodus, etc. In this volume, where the numerous pictures are amazingly interesting, he takes up the stories of Joseph and the Pharaoh, Moses, the Creation of the World, Noah's Flood, and the Tower of Babel.

It is popular in style and treatment; and is intended for the general public. The author thus describes its purpose: "its principal object is to demonstrate in a popular way the accuracy of the Bible in describing events and things, and through this the antiquity and authenticity of the Biblical writings."

The text is constantly accompanied by illustrations, showing the domestic habits and customs of the people. Joseph's relation to the chief butler and baker takes on a new interest, and that is only one of many incidents.

The way the Hebrews preserved their own splendid language while incorporating into it and strengthening it by Egyptian and other enrichments, is most interesting.

The familiar stories of the first two books of the Bible will become more appealing than ever, by this account and these pictures.

Arms And England

Geneva Whispers Urge Britain To Speed Rearmament.

By David Wills.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

GENEVA has become the whispering gallery of Europe. The Committee of Five and its sub-committee hatch a report on Abyssinia, and for fear of leakage refuse to put anything on paper. The press of Europe, for want of sober fact, magnifies the gossip of Geneva into wars and rumors of wars, reports from the "most reliable sources" that the League has sold out to Mussolini, exhortations to the League to be firm, denials and counter-denials, prayers and lamentations. And nobody knows where lies the truth.

The difficulty is that on the surface at least all the happenings at Geneva can be interpreted in diametrically opposite fashions. Sir Samuel Hoare has affirmed the devotion of England to the League and its principles of collective security. But in the same speech he claims that his country has always supported the League, which is palpably false. Is his exhortation to the world a sign that England has made a fundamental change in her policy, and is now prepared to stand wholeheartedly for collective responsibility, or is it merely a convenient but monetary disguise behind which England continues a substantially unaltered policy of self-interest? The speech will bear either interpretation.

When the French cry: "Give us a sign; give us a promise that England will be as keen for the application of League coercion in future quarrels which may concern us more intimately than this trivial Abyssinian affair," England stalls, reserves to herself the ultimate right to decide whether or not aggression has taken place in each specific instance, repeats merely a generalized promise. It may be a sincere promise, qualified only to avoid the risks of a bargaining alliance with France, but again it may be exactly the opposite.

• • • •

M. LAVAL says he supports Sir Samuel Hoare's sentiments, for France's policy has always been based on the League; France rejoices that England has been converted to the true doctrine. Yet France's policy in the past has been to use the League primarily as a buttress to support her supremacy over Germany, and there is increasing evidence that Laval, ignoring the League, gave Mussolini a free hand when last January he settled all points of difference between the two nations. The speeches of Laval and Hoare have been hailed with relief and enthusiasm among all the countries which have voted for the League, yet in themselves they are not sufficient proof that they mean what they appear to say.

For all their sentiments, neither France nor England have shown eagerness in the past to use the League as a means of revising treaties, of securing justice between nations, of obtaining by peaceful means such just revisions as have in the past been obtained by war. The anxiety and suspense which existed in the countries of Europe before the Geneva speeches remains almost unabated, for there is every reason to believe that the policies which those speeches appeared to renounce continue to be argued out in the Committee of Five. And that anxiety will not be allayed until the committee has delivered its report.

There is one sign that England at least appears to mean business. The garrison at Malta has been strengthened, a boom has been thrown across the harbor at Malta and at Gibraltar, and the British Mediterranean fleet, considerably augmented in strength, is to visit certain Greek ports from September 25 to October 15. The Greek ports outflank Mussolini's route to Suez, and within the period of the demonstration the rains are due to cease in Abyssinia. But the motives behind this action may be various. It is certain that part, at least, of the support for the British stand comes from he imperialists who think that they will never have better opportunity than the present to forestall Italian encroachment on British interests. If this motive predominates any sanctions which may be applied will be in support of the League in appearance only.

• • • •

IF the League applies ineffective sanctions against Italy, as Edward Acheson emphasized in The Post of September 4, the League is dead. And it is deader still if it makes an award in favor of Mussolini at the expense of Aybssinian independence. But even if the League applies firm sanctions, with naval backing, and forcibly restrains Mussolini, it is still uncertain if the League will have triumphed. The heart of the trouble will only then have been reached.

Mussolini, on behalf of Italy, and symbolically on behalf of all the Have-Not nations, demands room to expand, colonies, the panache of imperialism. Many of the League countries recognize the justice of some of his claims, but repudiate the method by which he proposes to satisfy them. What then do they offer instead?

The problem may be answered in five ways. The first is to give colonies to the Have-Nots, and since it is assumed that forcible annexation of now independent countries is ruled out, the colonies can only be transferred from one of the present imperial powers, particularly England. This is what Italy, Germany and Japan want, and what it is almost inconceivable that the present empires should grant. It is objected that it would be highly immoral, a breach of the White Man's Trust, to hand over native peoples to be drilled and militarized by the abhorrent absolutism of Nazi and Fascist government; that for all the talk of colonial resources, the only resource that can be exploited rapidly is labor, and this again is not in the best interests of the natives; that colonies are useful only if the mother country has enormous capital resources to invest in the colony, and it is well known that neither Germany, Italy nor Japan have such resources; that colonies are not an asset but an economic drawback, requiring subsidy from the mother country, and have only prestige value.

• • • •

SECOND possibility is to give the Have-Nots a mandate. But whatever the theoretical distinction between colony and mandate, in practice they amount to pretty much the same thing, and all the objections which apply to the one apply also to the other. Third suggestion is that the existing colonial empires should be pooled together in one common League mandate, with international administration and freedom of economic exploitation for all. The difficulties of this scheme are even greater than in the previous case, and at present it has merely theoretical interest.

Fourth solution is to preserve the existing ownership of the world's colonies, but to give the Have-Nots equal opportunities with all others, including the owners. This would be a reversal of present tendencies, for even the British crown colonies have been fenced off from foreigners for the benefit of the home country, and it is the solution least likely to satisfy the Have-Nots, since they are left as bare of prestige as ever. And the fifth possibility is to do nothing, guard what you have, and leave the right of ownership to be fought out in the future.

The only one of these solutions which would satisfy the Have-Nots is the first: colonies; and so far the only offer that has been made by England is emasculated version of the fourth: freedom of access to the resources of the present colonial empires. Hoare offered at Geneva an inquiry into the present distribution of colonial raw materials, with remedial action accepted in principle by Britain if it turns out that some nations do not receive their fair share. But if all that Sir Samuel means is that the Have-Nots should have free opportunity to buy colonial materials, his offer becomes a farce; freedom to buy is useless without freedom to sell. And it is rather naive and obvious for him to argue on behalf of the most colony-gluttered nation in the world, that the economic claim for colonies is of doubtful validity.

• • • •

IF it proves impossible to solve this colonial problem satisfactorily, and it is to be feared that the odds are enormously against it, even a victory of sanctions against the present instance of aggression will prove merely to have postponed the greater struggle to the not too distant future. And in that case one of two things may happen to the League; it may become a system of military alliances, or else it may break up.

In the first case it becomes an alliance of England, France, Russia and at first at least a majority of the smaller powers of Europe to restrain Germany and Italy. This may appear to be an overwhelming alliance, powerful enough to preserve peace; but if precedent is followed it will break up and sooner or later Germany and Italy will consider the time ripe for the further advancement of their "just" claims. To meet this threat, England and all the other countries will rearm. If the League breaks up it is more certain than ever that England will try to isolate herself from continental affairs and will most certainly rearm.

Those isolationists who have always advocated this policy for England, and those imperialists who refuse to make concessions to avoid it, contemplate the future almost with complacency. They admit that before long Germany will use force to seize what she wants in Europe, for all Hitler's apparent moderation in his demands about Mebel; they agree that with England neutral Germany will almost certainly be able to establish her hegemony over a large part of Europe. But what of it, they ask. It is all nonsense to assume that after subduing the rest of Europe Germany will then attack England, and even if she does we will always find enough allies in the conquered countries to turn the tide against Germany, for the conquered countries can not be destroyed, and there are not enough Germans to establish a Napoleonic empire. Nor need Britain be afraid that a German hegemony will destroy its European trade, which amounts at present to nearly 50 per cent of its total foreign trade. The Germans will want to sell their goods abroad and therefore will have to buy from Britain. Downing street policy is to keep hands off Europe and protect the empire. This nation must rearm, move its Atlantic fleet into the Mediterranean, the Mediterranean fleet to Singapore, and stand ready to face the world.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

Quack-Hunting As A Sport.

MR. LEONARD WOOLF, author of a number of books on history, politics and criticism, founder of the Hogarth Press, and husband of Virginia Woolf, is not what I should call a world figure. If he is famous in Bloomsbury, he is but a name, or less than a name, to nine-tenths of our literate people. No doubt at all, he is best known by the third of my defining terms—a mere "husband of."

All this may seem an uncalled-for depreciation, but I do it with a purpose. It will exhibit, in fact, the very gist and point of his inspiriting attack upon modern quackery—"Quack, Quack!" (Harcourt Brace, $2). For here is a man of prime honesty and intelligence, albeit as inconspicuously placed in life as I have noted, who succeeds with the simple weapons of reason and intellectual integrity in making unsavory mince-meat of Herr Hitler, Signor Mussolini, Herr Oswald Spengler and Count Herman Keyserling. He even chides soundly the noted philosopher, M. Henri Bergson. And it is fine sport to watch, and exciting to understand. It is the success of the mere honest man against the imposing quacks.

Attacks upon the Fascism of Italy and Germany are familiar enough to us. And though Mr. Woolf performs a valuable service for us in his section, "Quack, Quack in Politics," and shows us clearly the slap in the face of civilization and the essential return to the mind and the emotions of the savage which Fascism constitutes, I think we will find his second section, "Intellectual Quack, Quack" less familiar and more interesting.

• • • •

THE spectacle of Mr. Woolf slinging a stone square between the eyes of that Goliath of scholardom, Herr Oswald Spengler of "The Decline of the West," is one I enjoyed most heartily. Mr. Woolf, be it noted, sees much of profundity and illumination in those two massive volumes on the history of peoples and civilizations. But he knows they are written by a quack—a quack who fosters the modern intellectual revolt against reason by denying the necessity of definition and clear meaning, of analysis and proof; by exalting intuition and inspiration as the arbiters of absolute truth; by opening the way for the return to the primitive tribal magic which is so plain among the Fascists.

In 1933, 17 years after the publication of "The Decline of the West," Herr Spengler issued his much smaller work, "The Hour of Decision." And on this book Mr. Woolf heaps his scorn for its assertion that "all history is war history," that the traits of greed and violence are real and the traits of reason and liberty are unreal, that the hope of the world lies in the "super-races" and the "super-men." When Mr. Woolf dismisses Herr Spengler it is with sadness that "he has put far greater gifts at the disposal of quackery and savagery than any of his contemporaries."

The attack upon the metaphysicians—Bergson, Keyserling, the Hindu Radhakrishnan—consists in this: That they deny reason and logic as means of knowing truth (in vast tomes, by the way, which make use of reasonable words and logical sequences of thought, thus knocking the pins from under the very theories they profess); they make truth a matter of some higher, mystical incommunicable intuition; and they thus play hand in glove with crude, primitive psychology.

• • • •

ALL THIS, perhaps, needs to be drawn down to earth. Says Mr. Woolf: "In those periods which hitherto have been regarded as periods of civilization there has always been a distinct movement away from this primitive metaphysical psychology. The most 'civilized' men have refused to accept superstition and magic as an explanation of the universe and man's place in it. They have denied that the strength and unprovability of a belief are adequate grounds for believing that the belief is true. They have maintained that the beliefs which are the offsprings of emotion, sedatives to our fears, or the fulfillment of our desires, are suspect. They have insisted upon the right and duty of subjecting all beliefs to the test of reason and experience. The result has certainly always been the growth of skepticism and doubt."

And what can this tradition of civilization mean to us? Why, merely that at some not inconceivable day we might, as citizens, decline to be swayed by the tribal propaganda of war, that we might spare ourselves war's infinite pain and degradation, that we might, ourselves, have the power to prove that we are civilized.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Letter of Credit.

Your birth and breeding, I'll admit,
Leave nothing to desire;
You have a handsome income—
Much more than we'd require.

Your character's without a flaw!
You have no lurid past;
I know your abject excellence
Could never be surpassed.

But . . . of that very vital spark
Which makes the pulses race—
And gives life its excitement—
You haven't got a trace.

And so I'm going far away—
Lord knows I hate to do it;
Right now—before the die is cast
I have begun to rue it.

But if I stay where all the while
Your millions caper sweetly,
I know they will obliterate
Your face and form completely.

Good-by . . . and all that sort of thing.
I sail today at three,
My sole companion for the trip—
My damned integrity!

And Did You Ever Wash a Trunk in Warm Water.

(From the North Shore (Long Island) Journal.)

Q. How can I prevent moths and mice from getting into dresser drawers and trunks?

A. Soak in milk, then rinse in warm water with a little carbolic acid.

But it's so difficult to get a moth to step into the milk!

Autumn.

The time is ripe when poets sing
Of ashen skies and everything
That's sinister and squally;
They whine about the withered leaves,
And winds that wail beneath the eaves,
So sad and melancholy.

Yet now and then we find a fan
Whose eyes the crimson maples scan,
And revels in their glory;
He weeps not neither does he moan,
But sees in every somber tone
An optimistic story.

Culbertson On Bridge

A Fish Story.

If fishermen do not watch out they will lose to bridgemen the championship for "tall tales." In a prize-winning contribution to a contest for the tallest bridge stories, my friend, Miss Grace Fox, deserves a bouquet of orchids for the fishiest bridge story I have seen in a long time. It runs like this:

"In a recent tournament the bidding was pass, pass, pass, double. The fourth player, when asked what she was doubling, replied: 'O, I'm not doubling anything. I am just informing my partner that she must bid.'"

"And that isn't all. The next player passed and the partner of the informing doubler bid one club, which was made.

"But that isn't all, either. One of the opponents came over the next day, told me about it, and then claimed that it is one of the favorite bids in Ely's system."

Upon second thought, that gives me quite an idea for a new bid, and you will probably hear about it in the Model 1986.

A Hopeless Finesse.

The other day I sat behind a player who had the following trump suit:

Dummy.
J 6
A Q 7 4 2
Declarer.

He led the jack from dummy and finessed by playing low. It lost to the king. The opponent on his right had held 10 9 5 3 originally and later won a second trump trick.

With such a combination of cards there is nothing to be gained by finessing. At least one trump trick must be lost, even if the king is under the ace-queen. The way to play the suit is first to lead a low trump toward dummy's jack. If K x are at the left of declarer, he will, nevertheless, lose only one trick.

My Atrocious Bid.

If a bridge player is conceited he may be too fond of his own brilliant ideas and lose sight of sound general principles. Here is what happened to one of my own atrocious bids:

NORTH
♠ A-7-4
♥ Q-J-8-4-4
♦ 8-5-3
♣ 8-3

WEST
♠ K-Q-J-10-5
♥ K-7
♦ A-6-4
♣ 4-9-3

EAST

♣ Q-J-10-7-5-4

SOUTH
♠ 6-2
♥ A-10-9-5-3-2
♦ K-Q-9
♣ K-6

I was South and dealer. We were vulnerable. I bid one heart, West bid one spade, and North, my partner, immediately bid two spades. This is supposedly one of the strongest bids in contract, and should show, among other values, a spade void. I decided to bid gradually up to slam, and when my opponents finally went to five spades, I bid six hearts. West doubled, and I redoubled. West opened the king of spades.

Only when I saw the dummy did I remember that my partner was notoriously an unreliable bidder. My bidding, which was technically correct, was psychologically terrible. I foresaw a 4,000 point set.

I ducked the first spade lead, took the second and ruffed dummy's third spade. Then I laid down the ace and a low heart, giving the lead to West, who led the ace and another club. In the lead again, I went over to dummy with a trump and led a diamond. East played the deuce and I finessed the nine, forcing West's ace. I was down only three tricks, 1,800 points.

A man who watched me play the hand gave it to a newspaperman as an example of a well-played hand without bothering to say that the contract was six hearts redoubled. It looked good in print, and actually helped to bring me glory, but I knew just how bad it was.

Today's Question.

Question—What is the proper leader from Q J 8 6 3 against a no-trump contract?

Answer—Lead the six, your fourth highest. An honor is led from three in sequence, or from two touching honors when the next lower card is only one step lower (Q J 9).

Tomorrow's Hand.

West, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable and part-score 40.

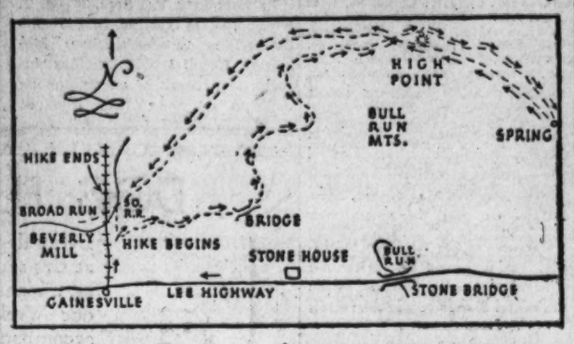
Virginia's Bull Run Mountains Goal of Wanderbirds Sunday



Members Will Traverse Historic Country on Weekly Hike.

By Robert Shosteck.

The Wanderbirds head this Sunday for the Bull Run Mountains of Virginia, 40 miles from Washington, little known, but full of interest to the geologist, botanist, historian and trail enthusiast alike.

Buses will leave from The Post Building at 9:15 a. m. Sunday, the hikers being asked to meet 15 minutes earlier. The round-trip fare will be $1, and tickets may be obtained tomorrow in The Post Building. Reservations should be made in advance by telephoning National 4200.

The buses, traveling along Lee highway to Gainesville, pass through historic country. Just to the north, the riders can see the old Stone Bridge, across Bull Run, over which Pope's retreating army passed in August, 1862. The old stone house just beyond was used as a battlefield hospital.

The buses turn north at Gainesville, reaching Broad Run at Thoroughfare Gap, through which Confederate armies under J. E. Johnston and Stonewall Jackson marched in July, 1861, on the way to the first battle of Manassas.

The hike itself will cover 7½ miles, along a picturesque tote road. A short steep climb over a well-cleared trail affords glimpses of the valley, and on days of good visibility a view of the faraway peaks of the Blue Ridge.

Below sheer cliffs, boulder-strewn slopes, pits and crevices give mute evidence of the forces of nature.

In the forest the first tinges of autumn will be visible—crimson mantles, flaunted by the dogwood, the black gum, the sassafras and the sumac in fall fraternity.

Hikers are advised to wear durable clothes and comfortable walking shoes and to bring lunch and filled canteens. There are springs on the mountain, but not at advantageous spots.

For the return the buses will meet the hikers at 5:30 p. m., and should reach Washington again shortly after 7 p. m.

Hike leaders will be Miss Isabel Dolmage and Philip McCrae.

The leaves of Turkish tobacco are strung one by one like beads (see how it is done in the picture). After the leaves are strung they are packed in bales (see picture) —sometimes as many as 80,000 leaves to the bale.

We have on hand at all times for CHESTERFIELD cigarettes upwards of 350,000 bales of Turkish tobacco...

The pleasing aroma and flavor of Turkish tobacco is almost necessary if you want a good cigarette.

Turkish tobacco is more costly when you take into account that you have to pay 35c a pound duty, but we have to have it to blend with our mild ripe home-grown tobaccos.

It helps make Chesterfields milder, it helps give them better taste. Just try them.

Charges Made Against Rudy To Be Sifted

Nice Probes Allegation of Favoritism in State Vehicle Bureau.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 26.—Gov. Harry W. Nice disclosed today he had begun an investigation into charges of favoritism and merit system violation brought against Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Walter R. Rudy.

Together with a demand for Rudy's removal, the charges were laid before the Governor by Willis R. Jones, counsel for the Maryland Classified Employers Association and representative of Milton W. Schlutter, who was suspended as a legal examiner in the commissioner's office.

Nice said he had named a State official to make the investigation, but did not reveal his identity. He also said he had asked for statements from all those connected with the alleged irregularities.

The Governor conferred yesterday with State Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones, before whom Schlutter's application for reinstatement is pending.

Schlutter had charged Rudy with favoritism, violating the merit system law and with irregularities in enforcing the motor vehicle act.

Courage.

New York, Sept. 26.

YOU can feel pity for Max Baer today, pity that he was too smart to get up and take a licking. Shrewder minds than mine will praise him for his intelligence in staying down on one knee while he was counted out. In the years to come, however, I imagine that Baer will curse the one streak of intelligence that bobbed to the surface in a daffy career, for Maxie, to the end of pugilistic time, must answer "Here" when they call the roll of the ring's poltroons. The brighter pages of history do not occupy themselves with the guys who were smart enough to call "quits" under fire. History instead is made by the chappies who were not smart enough to know when they were beaten, because in the important crisis, you do not give a man an intelligence test. You listen for the beat of his heart. There are awards for intelligence, true enough, but the Congressional Medal of Honor isn't one of them.

• • • •

There were a great many generals in the World War, but you remember best the French leader, who said: "My left wing is beaten back, my right is in retreat. I will attack through the center," I daresay that this Frenchman was stupid, but he was a good, game gentleman, and I'll take him and you can have those who were intelligent enough to yell: "Stop firing." I saw Johnny Risko get up off the canvas one night, bloody and befuddled. He had difficulty in focusing his eyes on anything, but through the mists Risko saw Max Schmeling and he lunged at him. Schmeling was going to blast his head off, but Risko was not a smart fellow. He was brave, not shrewd; he was a fighter, not a businessman, and Risko, even in his bewilderment, figured that he might achieve a miracle. I saw Johnny Dundee, one night at Ebbets Field, break his right arm. An intelligent person would have quit then and there. The crack of the splintered bone would have been the SOS. But Dundee wasn't smart. With his broken arm held tightly to his side, Dundee fought and beat Fred Brettonel, the Frenchman, with his left.

• • • •

Courage in the theater is not expressed so dramatically, but the stage dictum is: "The show must go on." One night I saw Ed Wynn in an exhibition of sheer "heart" that would have shamed Baer. With his personal fortune tied up in "Laugh Parade," Wynn stepped out on the stringpiece and, single-handed, converted a flop into a smash hit. He didn't take the count on his knees. He kept punching home the comedy that covered a multitude of weaknesses. On the night "Hot Cha" opened, Lupe Velez was so nervous that she became nauseated. But when she stepped on the stage, she left fear behind in the wings.

• • • •

Baer's removal from the heavyweight ranks is trivial and unimportant, but it is important that the youngsters of the country do not come to the conclusion that there is high honor and laurel wreaths to the one who calls: "Enough!" Let the kids starting out understand now, before the barrier is sprung, that Life will knock them down and bloody their noses more than three times. Let them understand that down the lane they'll travel, they'll become footsore and weary from disappointments in business and in friendship. People they trust will knock them down with bludgeons, and people they distrust will outsmart them. If, the third time they are flattened, these fledgling citizens of the world will stay down for the full count, it were better they never started. There were businessmen at the ringside of the Baer-Louis fight who must have watched his sorry exit in sheer amazement. The businessmen who stuck to their guns during the panic days of the depression, who refused to jump off buildings or look into the barrel of a gun when their fortunes were swept away, could not hope to understand Baer when the pressure was applied to him. He didn't talk their language.

• • • •

It is unfortunate that any of the credit that goes to Joe Louis in victory should be tarnished by the unworthiness of his foe. The Duke of Wellington was fortunate that he had a Napoleon to test his steel. Montcalm was lucky that at Quebec he was opposed to Wolfe. The glory of Grant was given added sheen because he conquered Gen. Lee. Too bad that Louis, a brilliant ringman, could not have achieved a victory at the expense of a Dempsey or a Tunney. It is not the Detroiter's fault that the best material at his disposal includes a Carnera, a frightened Levinsky and an "intelligent" Baer. He is worthy of better competition, because this Joe Louis is the greatest of the modern fighters. He has rare talent, he has explosive force in his crimson fighting mittens, and he has a full measure of courage.

• • • •

He has answered every demand that has been addressed to him, but the demands aren't sufficiently harsh. It is as if a George Arliss could not find a scenario worthy of his talent, or a Katharine Cornell could not find a script strong enough to display her artistry. The material with which Louis has to work is shoddy and shopworn, and this is a pity. He is in the position of Man o' War, who had none to extend him to his ultimate power.

LET KIDNEYS FLUSH OUT 3 LBS. A DAY
Clean Out 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes
Nature put over 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters in your kidneys to strain the waste matter out of the blood. Kidneys should pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter.
When the passing of water is scanty, with smarting and burning, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.
If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your body may take up some of these poisons causing serious trouble. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, which have been used successfully by millions of people for over 40 years. They give happy relief and help the kidneys to flush out 3 pounds a day. Insist on Doan's Pills.

Can you Answer these Questions about the GIN you buy?

In the following paragraphs, The Fleischmann Distilling Corporation tells you 4 simple ways to judge gin

TO MAKE a crystal-clear, superlatively smooth distilled gin is a modern science requiring elaborate equipment and great human skill.

Yet the market is flooded today with more than 2,000 different brands of gin. Naturally they represent a wide range of Quality.

How, then, can you judge which brand of gin will suit your individual taste and mix more smoothly in your cocktails?

To guide you in making your selection, The Fleischmann Distilling Corporation gives you, in question-and-answer form, four basic standards that can be used to determine quality in a gin.

1. Is the gin made by a distillery?

The Federal Government has provided a way by which you can tell if the gin you buy is made by a distillery.

On every bottle made by a distillery, there is a "D" blown into the glass—followed by the license number of the distillery.

The symbol "D-247" blown into the Fleischmann bottle is your assurance that this famous American gin is made entirely by the Fleischmann distillery—from spirits distilled by Fleischmann.

Fleischmann buys no spirits on the open market. Each step in the making of Fleischmann's Gin, from the purchase of the grain to the finished bottle, is controlled by Fleischmann.

That is why cocktails mixed with Fleischmann's Gin are always so deliciously smooth and mild.

The next time you buy gin, be sure to look for the "D" on the bottle.

2. Is the gin distilled from grain or molasses?

There are several sources from which spirits for the making of gin can be distilled.

The two most widely used are grain and molasses.

Grain is the time-honored and more expensive source of spirits. And, furthermore, grain produces fine and very desirable spirits from this standpoint.

Fleischmann's Gin, as stated on the label of the bottle, is "produced from 100% domestic grain."

Fleischmann maintains a special staff of men who have had long experience in selecting the particular type of grain best suited for the making of gin.

That is just one of the reasons why Fleischmann's Gin is smoother tasting and never "dominates" the flavor of a cocktail or highball.

3. Is it made from spirits distilled exclusively for gin?

The quality of a well-balanced gin depends primarily upon the quality of the spirits used to make it.

Any distiller knows that gin is superior when the spirits have been distilled exclusively for the making of gin.

The Fleischmann Distilling Corporation makes gin—and nothing else. The spirits used for Fleischmann's Gin are distilled exclusively for gin.

Thousands of experiments, years of research and the most expensive equipment have been devoted by Fleischmann to achieving exactly the right type of spirits to make the finest gin.

4. Is it an American Gin?

The cocktail is an American invention. To make one successfully requires a milder flavored gin that will blend smoothly with other liquors and fruit juices.

Fleischmann's is the original American gin—especially distilled for mixing.

Its American label tells you that Fleischmann's was "Established 1870." This means established in America in 1870.

Since 1870, interrupted only by Prohibition, Fleischmann has been developing and perfecting a milder flavored American-type gin—designed to satisfy the American taste in mixed drinks.

TRY FLEISCHMANN'S GIN
It's the Gin with all 4 Features:

1. Made by a Distillery.
2. Made from 100% domestic grain—not from molasses.
3. Made from spirits distilled exclusively for gin.
4. Made from an American formula—for American tastes and drinking customs.

Price Slashed On Materials For Interiors

Fabrics for Slip Covers and Drapes Offered at Lowest Cost.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

WOMEN whose fancy turns this time of the year to "doing over" the house will enjoy a certain interior decoration shop. The gentleman in charge has a wealth of imported fabrics (exclusive with him) which he sells at amazingly low prices. And not only that, he upholsters and makes slip covers and drapes at amounts that leave you reeling with delight.

As he himself said yesterday, "We want to sell the fabrics; consequently, we do the work for almost nothing!"

The fabrics are of a sort that take your breath. Particularly lovely is an ivory-white heavy satin-like material with the inwoven wistaria design. This comes also in gold and green.

Another beautiful fabric is called soierie Louis IV. Believe it or not, but this is selling at less than wholesale prices. Available in a ravishing rust, also green and gold.

An antique satin in luminous rose has an honest-to-goodness glow about it.

Interesting to many is the table filled with chintz, plain and glazed. These fabrics the gentleman is selling at 25 cents a yard.

The handblocked linens for covers and curtains are exquisite. The designs themselves are works of art.

Quaint Lamps Offered.

IT'S great fun picking out a lamp from among the $1 assortment in a downtown store. The quaintest models displayed are those with parchment shades painted with small anchors. The base is maple, made in the shape of a pilot wheel.

Needless to say, these lamps are ideally adapted to a boy's room or a den.

Toilet Articles on Sale.

TODAY'S the day of the sale. Drop by the toilet goods department and you'll marvel at the grand things for such small sums.

There are some large bottles of bath crystals in a delightful French fragrance reduced from $1.65 to 49 cents. And you should see the dresser sets for only $3.69! They're chromium and enamel, in green, cream, blue and black.

A zipper manicure case in black or brown leather is 69 cents. It contains all the essentials for a complete manicure.

For 79 cents you may buy two lovely white china bottles and powder jar, so skillfully touched up in blue they positively look Dresden.

And Perfumes!

MOST OF YOU have heard of, though you may not have tried, a certain alluring French perfume called L'Heure Intime (Intimate Hour). It's one perfume that's definitely different. It does things! It really has appeal! There's richness about the fragrance that reminds you of luxurious furs, glistening fabrics. There's something about it that makes you think of romance in tune with soft, pulsating music.

This week if you buy one dram or more of this irresistible fragrance you'll be presented, with the compliments of the manufacturers, a large, chiffon evening handkerchief already perfumed.

For "Late" Husbands.

THE HUSBAND who is "detained at the office" and reaches home reeking with alcohol would have followed a wiser course had he inhaled a drop or two of a little wonder worker featured in a downtown store.

As a matter of fact, it's a liquid but you don't drink it. You simply put a drop on your tongue and inhale. Presto! all telltale odors are gone.

This is a boon for those who love onions but hate their significant aroma.

You may buy it in small bottles, vest pocket size, for only 20 cents.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Light Accents Make Frock Of Dark Color Effective

Pattern No. 963.

THE dark frock, sharply accented with light touches, makes a most effective costume. This one is particularly stunning because the gown is so perfectly cut, and the collars and cuffs so original in design, so full of flattery. A nice variety may be achieved by making several sets in different fabrics and colors.

The pattern is absolutely accurate in all sizes, and the fit remarkably fine. The pieces are few and simple. And it is really an easy task to put them together and have this attractive new dress. The pattern is cut in sizes 12 to 20; 30 to 38. In size 16 (36) fabric requirements are 2¾ yards of 54-inch material and five-eights yard of 39-inch for the collar and cuffs.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Young Mother Would Ally Self With Opponents of Capital Punishment.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: There are some things which I regard as social injustices. The one I have in mind now is capital punishment. It is nothing but murder by the masses! I believe that such criminals should be given life-term sentences without a chance at parole. If this country's laws would not permit easy paroles there would be much less crime.

• • • •

I'm sure there are others who feel the same as I do. I am a young mother with very little leisure time, but if there is anything such a one as I can do to remove capital punishment from the statutes of the country, I would like to do it. Sincerely, C. L. C.

Darrow Heads League.

DEAR C. L. C.: I am entirely in sympathy with your views concerning capital punishment. I never read of a legal execution without experiencing mingled emotions of horror, dismay and wonderment at the singular lack of imagination of persons who act cold bloodedly in the name of the law to put a man to death. But then I am scarcely less appalled by such savage, inhumane and uncivilized spectacles as the recent Baer-Louis prize fight, which attracted the attendance of approximately 100,000 men and women from all stratas of society. Perhaps a society which can applaud the latter is not spiritually prepared to discountenance the former.

• • • •

But I congratulate you on your willingness to put your individual shoulder to the wheel and advance, however infinitesimally, the onward march of slow-moving civilization of mind and heart. So far as I can learn, the only existing organized movement against capital punishment is the American League to Abolish Capital Punishment, headquartered at 145 East Fifty-seventh street, New York City, of which Clarence Darrow was president in 1934. Perhaps he still heads the organization.

• • • •

If you will write this organization declaring your sentiments and asking for instructions on how to register those sentiments effectively on public consciousness, you may be shown the way to work intelligently on behalf of its cause.

Official Family of 80,000 Doesn't Upset Smooth Running of Mrs. Doyle's Home

How Does She Do It? By Planning Her Time, Says School Board Head.

By Dudley Harmon.

AN OFFICIAL FAMILY of some 80,000 children does not prevent Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, new president of the Washington Board of Education, from being an excellent mother in private life to a family of two boys and a girl.

The busy housewife who pauses in her morning duties to wipe Junior's nose for the fifteenth time in as many minutes and to wonder how one lone woman can be expected to do her housework and bring up children at the same time should take a leaf from Mrs. Doyle's book. For 17 years she has successfully combined the business of being a wife and mother with activities outside the home. Now, with working hours filled with endless details, with new desks to be bought for this or that school, with a raise in pay to be considered for this or that teacher, Mrs. Doyle still finds time to give her young ones all the benefits of a mother's attention.

According to Mrs. Doyle, her recipe for success is contained in the one word, "planning."

Question of Compromise.

"Any woman can do what I've done," she said. "You see, it is largely a question of compromise. Instead of going to bridge parties and teas in the daytime, I would rather work. So I accept very few invitations of this type, preferring instead to devote what time I have left from my job to my husband and children.

"Then, too, I am unusually fortunate in having a position which permits me to leave work just about the time my children get home from school. Another thing—I never make any engagements over Saturday and Sunday.

"Not that I play watchdog over the children when I am home. No indeed. Since they range in age from 14 to 17, they are old enough by this time to have their own little circle of friends. It's more a question of being available in case the children want my companionship. If they rush home with something exciting to tell, they want someone sympathetic there to tell it to. If they have questions to ask, they should have someone to turn to immediately for advice. So my children know that I am always there in case they want me, though they do not feel that I am sitting around like a hawk ready to interfere in their activities."

Urges Parent, Teacher Co-operate.

Mrs. Doyle, who looks much too young and gay to be as efficient as she is, believes that mothers and teachers can co-operate to a great extent in smoothing the path of the child both at home and at school. Since the child divides his time between the two, the influences of both play an equally important part in his life. If the child is difficult at school or at home, or both, Mrs. Doyle thinks that mother and teacher should get together and talk over the problem.

"For example," she said, "a friend of mine had a little boy who simply would not keep his hands clean. So his mother and teacher put their heads together. The former agreed not to help him with his homework until he first washed his hands, and the latter promised not to let him take any tests or receive any papers back until he had a clean pair of paws to show. The system worked beautifully."

Prior to her appointment as the first woman president of the Board of Education Mrs. Doyle served as a member of this board for eight years, and has been active in many community and national women's undertakings.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, first woman president of the Washington Board of Education, who has three children of her own, successfully combines outside activities with the making of a pleasant home for her husband and children.

Chance of Injury Slight if Expert Directs the Treatments.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THE curious electrical rays discovered by Wilhelm Konrad Roentgen in 1895 still remain a mystery to most of us. But their power is invoked every day—yes, thousands of times each day—in all parts of the world. Not only are they used to photograph bones and to identify disease, but their employment in the treatment of tumors and skin growths has greatly increased.

Many authorities now recognize what is called "Roentgen ray sickness," of which three types, according to G. W. Holmes and F. T. Hunter, are now identified. The first is called "toxic sickness," which is characterized by nausea and vomiting following heavy doses of X-ray designed to destroy or at least retard the growth of large masses of tumor tissue. It is believed that during and following a period of exposure many cells are destroyed and their products are absorbed by the body. Illness may arise, therefore, because added work is thrown upon the liver in its effort to excrete and neutralize cell toxins. The only means that can be adopted to alleviate these symptoms is by reducing the dosage and hence the rapidity with which tissues are broken down.

Another type is thought to be the result of nervousness and is observed in high strung individuals who may have been erroneously advised that X-ray treatments would make them ill.

A third variety, known as "true Roentgen sickness," appears to be the result of actual liver failure that arises because of excessive radiation. Most X-ray operators have noted that the incidence of nausea and vomiting following treatment depends upon the dose employed and the part of the body to which the rays are directed.

Curved Spines Are a Penalty Of Small Home

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"There was a crooked man," runs the nursery rhyme, ending with the line, "They all lived together in a little crooked house." Probably if the truth were told, the man was crooked because he lived in a little house, for often, seeing the result, one forgets to look at the cause.

Even in this day of athletics and posture exercises, there are hundreds of girls, and an amazingly large proportion of boys who are growing up crooked, and are handicapped all their lives by curvatures of the spine due in part at least to habits contracted in early childhood. Others as a result of these same habits are near-sighted, and still others have digestive troubles, or narrow chests and stooped shoulders.

There is too little space in many homes, especially in city apartments, for children to stretch and grow. Their rooms are small, and so their toys and indoor amusements must be correspondingly small. They draw and write on small paper because there is no room for a blackboard or a stretch of wrapping-paper. They cannot romp because there is no place to romp, and the neighbors would object to the noise if they did.

Of course, everyone cannot move to the country, and large houses in the city are beyond most purses. But at least the problem can be met squarely and special care taken to compensate for the cramped conditions of the house.

As far as possible, the child should be given a chance to expand. If he wants to draw, encourage him to use a large scale and let him use the floor or the dining-room table rather than a minute nursery table. Let him sprawl and relax, and when he is out of doors give him all the freedom possible.

Gridiron Season Calls for Warm Clothes

Harris Tweed Topcoat With Wool Lining Recommended.

By John Q. Alexander.

AH, FALL! The bloom's off the rose, but the frost is on the pumpkin and all's right with the world—right chilly.

But fall is fun. The wind may be sharper than a step-mother's tongue and the weather colder than a last year's romance. But think of those moments when we can curl up like a contented anchovy before an open grate, seeing things in the dying embers. And those moments when we come to grips with Nature, gulping down huge lung-fuls of crisp, clean air. And think of football, and those hours we spend bouncing about in frigid grandstands, howling for the old team through teeth chattering like castanets. Whoops, fall!

Speaking of football, which practically everybody is, you'll need a sport glass, the better to see with, grandma. If you can't afford a good glass, look at the outfit we saw yesterday for 98 cents—dirt cheap. Not a first-class pair, of course, but then what do you want for the money? Made of black composition, and will magnify ten and one-half times, making the pigskin heroes almost as big in your eyes as they are in those of your girl-friend.

Harris Tweed Topcoats.

A red nose and blue lips are not necessarily a part of what the well-dressed spectator will wear at this season's games. A Harris tweed topcoat will keep him warm. This fabric is probably the best tweed in the world. It is woven by natives on the Isles of Harris and Lewis off the coast of Scotland, where the climate is so terrible that even the sheep have sense enough to grow extra special wool.

The material is dyed by hand, and the colors, particularly the heather mixtures, are superb. One outfitter is showing a regulation raglan coat with a wool plaid lining, very gay, of authentic Tartans this season. This lining is detachable, leaving a light, warm topcoat with self-lining of celanese. Aside from its practical features, this detachable lining has a romantic angle. You could detach it and wrap it around your girl at the game and feel Sir Walter Raleigh-ish. The coat sells for $55 and is worth it.

Another useful article for fall wear is the turtleneck sweater, which is back with a bang. The snug neck keeps the wind from whistling down your spine and is flattering, besides. Best ones we've seen are of loose, very broad chain knit, very smart and warm. Available in blue, tan or gray. Useful in and out of town all winter, and the strain on your wallet is only $6.50.

Knit Underwear.

Going beneath the surface, we discover that the well-dressed man is embracing (or being embraced by) knit underwear. Snort at grandpa's long drawers if you like, but they had their good points, for there is a comfort in knit wear which no cloth can give, however soft. Now, for the gent who wears athletic types of underwear all-year-round comes a brief affair of knit lisle. It is one-piece, buttonless, sleeveless, and, of course, short. Just so you won't feel you're straying too far from the beaten path, the bottom half is colored, like your regular shorts. Even if grandpa was a Confederate he'd go for this union suit. $1 each.

Getting even more personal, we mention, without raising an eyebrow, the new abdominal and athletic supporter for men. Made of Lastex, it is scientifically designed to support the abdominal muscles (aiding digestion). In addition, improve your posture. It is loose knit, to allow your pores to breathe, slips on and off with ease and is as easy to launder as an ordinary pair of shorts. With chest up, stomach in, you'll look like a West Point graduate, and feel better, too. The price is $3 and the store reports that they are selling dozens of them.

Turtle-Neck Sweater Is a Useful Garment for Fall Wear.

Perfect Tobacco Pouch.

The perfect tobacco pouch has arrived in town. It is made in England of oil silk, so that you can see what you're doing when you fill your pipe, and has a patented arrangement which does away with dust. Clogged stems and particles of dust in throat and mouth are now a thing of the past, as this pouch cleans your tobacco automatically, the mere action of filling your pipe causing the dust to percolate through a sieve into the outer covering, whence it can be easily emptied. Another good thing is that the pouch can be folded to fit in your breast pocket, getting away from bulk around the hips. $1.25.

Bargain-of-the-week note: One store will give you 50 razor blades for 50 cents. The blades are of chrome blue surgical steel, honed in oil, and will fit any double-edge razor.

Mr. Alexander's articles appear on this page each Friday. For information on men's fashions, or for the names of shops carrying the items mentioned above, call National 4200, branch 323, or write, inclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THE LADY of the house owes herself a frivolous spree after a siege of being terribly economical and extra practical for ever so long. So we aid and abet this reader in her plans.

• • • •

A. L. WRITES: I've always had the rag taggiest bedroom! Whenever there has been money to spend on the house, I have put it where it would show more. But now I feel that my morale depends on a pretty room for myself. I've run amuck and bought some new walnut furniture, and I'm even going to have myself a fancy dressing table for primping. The question is colors. I'm having the room papered and buying a new rug, new draperies and bedspread and a boudoir chair. I feel positively scarlet, but my husband assures me that I still look my usual middle-aged self! Will you help me with ideas?

• • • •

ANSWER: I think a blue room is the prettiest thing, and there are some lovely wallpapers with blue grounds. Then a soft lightish blue rug which isn't terribly practical in color but can be cleaned successfully. For the windows shell pink satin draperies over cream ninon glass curtains. The bedspread would be beautiful in this same satin, and the chair, I would have in a flowered material on a cream ground. Add accessories of cream color and a cream lace dressing table skirt.

Recent Fisticuffing Revives Problem of Widespread Exhibition of Fight Films

Invalid Law Is Due for Repeal Or Execution

No Ban on Rassle Films; Vaudeville De Luxe; Theater Chatter.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

An old bone of contention will be revived by the Joe Louis-Max Baer fisticuffing in New York Tuesday night. For years now it has bobbed up from time to time and probably will continue to do so until permanently buried by legislative enactment. I mean that law on the Federal statute book that prohibits the interstate transportation of prize fight films.

Motion pictures, as everyone knows, were made of the four rounds of modified mayhem—and it wasn't so very much modified, at that—Tuesday night. The premium paid for the privilege, along with radio, played its part in swelling the gross receipts of the Yankee Stadium's fling at being a Circus Maximus to something over the million-dollar mark, according to last report. Those pictures were made with the idea of their being exhibited elsewhere than exclusively in New York State, the only Commonwealth in which they can be shown legally.

These pictures, as a matter of cold fact that might as well be admitted, will be shown in all corners of the United States before the emulsion on the celluloid is fairly set!

They will, no doubt—if past experience may be relied upon for precedent—be screened just over the District Line in any, or all, of several eminently respectable and widely patronized suburban motion-picture theaters. But they will not be shown in Washington. This is one of the anomalies of the law.

Law Merely Makes It Tough.

As many Washingtonians as wish to, will view the Louis-Baer films. They will view them, however, with the least possible convenience and comfort. I do not mean by this to imply that the theaters in which the pictures will be shown are not comfortable, but merely to suggest that to reach them residents of the Capital will be compelled to make long motor trips, undergo the usual difficulties in finding parking space, consume a great deal of time and be put to other inconveniences, all of which would be obviated were the law repealed once and for all.

There is scant equity, at best, in the present legal setup that places a ban on fight films and permits unrestricted distribution and exhibition of wrestling pictures in which behemoths of ponderous dimensions and little science kick each other in the face, dive head-first into each other's midriffs and bounce their massive bodies upon the prone torsos of their antagonists in the hope that they will be rendered sufficiently hors de combat not to be able to arise again until the referee has tolled his fatal three, instead of ten.

Furthermore, the circumstances and conditions surrounding the enactment of the law prohibiting the interstate transportation of fight films seem to have disappeared.

It was precisely such a mixed fight as Tuesday night's that prompted the passage of the act. The Jack Johnson-Jim Jeffries battle in Reno, Nev., 25 years ago, had an aftermath of race riots, bitterness and bloodshed that have no present counterpart in the victory of Joe Louis over Max Baer.

No More Johnson.

The Louis entourage from all accounts and every piece of tangible evidence is a well-balanced business organization that wants no part of any such didoes as eventually made Jack Johnson a fugitive from justice and an exile from the land of his birth, to which his behavior brought no credit whatsoever.

If there is no more intention to enforce the interstate fight ban than there has been in the past, then the legislation should be repealed. As long as the fight pictures are going to be shown, anyway, their showing should be made lawful and easy of access for those who wish to view them.

It is ridiculous to suppose that nobody but the 90,000 present in the arena Tuesday night wanted to see the scrap. The pictures will pack 'em in wherever they are presented. Everyone who pays any attention whatever to sports wants to see how this superman of the ring, Joe Louis, does it.

It is as preposterous to pretend that the fight pictures will not be shown all over the East and Middle West, at least, as to defend the proposition that there was no drinking in this country during prohibition. And that is pretty preposterous, if you ask me. It is pretty preposterous even if you don't ask me.

I suggest that Senator W. Warren Barbour, of New Jersey, former amateur heavyweight champion, would be a splendid one to initiate the move to rescind this silly business.

It may not be going too far to invite attention to the caliber of the vaudeville bill to be presented on the stage at Loew's Fox Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Lou Holtz, Belle Baker and Block and Sully as co-headliners of a single bill, present such a coalition of greatness in the amusement world as has not been seen locally since the old B. F. Keith house was in its heyday at a $2.20 top admission charge, under the management of Roland Robbins—and not too often then. It recalls the old days of Hammerstein's Victoria in New York, where it was the custom of Oscar Hammerstein, first, to present as many headliners as he could get on every bill he presented.

I recall, for example, one week at the Victoria when McIntyre & Heath, Eva Tanguay, Cressey & Dayne, James J. Morton, "Rube" Dickinson and Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Barry all were featured on the same bill. These names may not mean much to the present generation of theatergoers, raised on a diet of gelatin drama, but each act was a headliner relied upon to carry the bill, if need be, when booked here.

The bill coming into the Fox may not quite match the late elder Hammerstein's, but it is a fair approximation, the present status of vaudeville being what it is. And what it is, if you must know, is practically defunct.

Line Forms at Right.

The advance sale of tickets for the reserved seat, "road show" engagement of Cecil B. De Mille's spectacular screen production of "The Crusades" opens this morning at 9 o'clock at the National Theater. This elaborate picture will inaugurate the new season at the National on Sunday night at 8:45.

All seats will be reserved throughout the week's engagement of this stupendous composite of the salient features of all the crusades rolled into one gigantic film narrative. After Sunday night's local premiere of this latest of the De Mille historical pageants, showings will be twice daily at 2:45 and 8:45 p. m., at prices ranging from 55 cents to $1.10 at matinees and from 55 cents to $1.65 at night.

"The Crusades," already previewed by the drama desks of the local press, is executed on the scale of magnificence that has characterized all of Cecil De Mille's pretentious historical dramas.

Excels in Story.

In the directness and forcefulness of its romantic developments as well as in the thrilling depiction of significant events in history, it perhaps transcends both "The Sign of the Cross" and "Cleopatra," the most recent of this director-producer's "super-productions" to be seen in the National Capital.

The cast and ensemble of thousands is led by Henry Wilcoxon, Loretta Young, Ian Keith and numerous others whose names will be found in another column on this page.

Paramount, distributors of "The Crusades," announces that after the National engagement this picture will not be shown again in Washington this year. Its release to the regular picture houses is many months away.

Bert Granoff, popular Washington tenor, will be heard with Freddie Clark's Earle Theater Orchestra during the week beginning tomorrow, in a specially arranged overture, under Mr. Clark's direction. Mr. Granoff's solo numbers will be "Lovely to Look At," from "Roberta," and "Ol' Man River," from "Showboat."

Tomorrow between the hours of 12 noon and 12:30 on four F street corners roses to the number of 2,000 will be presented to the first 2,000 women to come along with the compliments of Clark Gable, featured with Loretta Young, Jack Oakie, Reginald Owen and Buck, the St. Bernard, in "The Call of the Wild," opening on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater the same day.

On each rose will be a card bearing the compliments of Mr. Gable and a hint that the roses have been supplied by Blackistone, Inc., 1407 H street.

There is nothing in "The Call of the Wild" of which a rose is in the least symbolic. What they ought to do is give away snowballs!

However, there they are—go get 'em!

Modest Suggestion Note.

Now, if they would just give away 2,000 Bucks on four F street corners, that would be something like it—and you can take it either way you like.

Goes "Musher" in London Yarn

A new portrait study of Clark Gable, most popular of the cinema's matinee idols, who goes wild and woolly, under a week's growth of stubble, in one of the stellar roles in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of the late Jack London's story of "The Call of the Wild," an "epic" of the Alaska gold rush. Sharing honors with Gable in this subject are Loretta Young, Jack Oakie, Reginald Owen and the greatest actor of them all, Buck, the 2-year-old St. Bernard. "The Call of the Wild" opens at the Palace tomorrow.

'The Crusades' Opens National Season Sunday

De Mille Spectacle Leads Worthy List of Week's New Film Bills.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

"The Crusades," latest of the screen spectacles in Cecil B. De Mille's series of pictures dealing with epochal periods in world's history, will be presented as a "road show" attraction in the National Theater for one week beginning Sunday night at 8:45 o'clock. Showings thereafter will be twice daily, matinee and night, all seats reserved.

In this gigantic film narrative, setting forth a composite of the drama, romance and adventure of all the crusades, the director-producer has assembled a cast of genuine note, led by Henry Wilcoxon, Loretta Young, Ian Keith, C. Henry Gordon, Katherine De Mille, C. Aubrey Smith, Alan Hale, Hobart Bosworth, William Farnum, Joseph Schildkraut, George Barbier and many others of like standing.

The story of the "The Crusades" is closely knit and coherent and makes possible the introduction of some of the most far-flung and spectacularly thrilling scenes De Mille ever has devised. The photography is flawless.

One of the most noteworthy vaudeville bills of this or any other season will distinguish next week's program at Loew's Fox Theater, beginning tomorrow, when Lou Holtz, Broadway's favorite jester; Belle Baker, brilliant songstress, and Block and Sully, the comic duo known equally by stage and radio audiences—screen, too, for that matter, since Eddie Cantor's "Kid Millions"—will coheadline the bill. Pete, Peaches and Duke, dancing differently, and Pierce and Harris, jesters of the dance, also will be seen. On the screen the foremost feature will be "Bonnie Scotland," the new feature-length comedy produced by Hal Roach as a starring vehicle for Laurel and Hardy, June Lang, William Janney, David Torrence, Daphne Pollard and Ann Gray support the stars. The bill will be completed by Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's orchestral contributions.

PWA Grants $2,459,608 Aid To Maryland

Several Nearby Towns Share in Allotment for Projects.

Outlays Will Exceed $5,000,000 With 55% From the State.

Several grants for nearby projects were among 18 Maryland public works allotments totaling $2,459,608 approved yesterday by President Roosevelt.

The expenditures actually will total $5,144,796, as the communities benefited agreed to contribute 55 per cent of the cost to supplement 45 per cent from Uncle Sam.

Abel Wolman, acting PWA director for Maryland, was instructed by Secretary Ickes to see that all outlays conform to President Roosevelt's formula of employment of one man for each $850 spent.

One of the outstanding grants was $180,000 set aside for the Washington Suburban Sanitary District. It will be used to extend water and sewer lines and construct a standpipe to supply Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties. The project will cost about $400,000.

$100,000 for Schools.

Upper Marlboro, Prince Georges County, received $100,000 for school additions.

One of the largest allotments was $1,000,000 to assist the Maryland Roads Commission finance its street, highway and bridge construction program.

Other grants included Chesapeake Beach, Calvert County, $56,364 for a shore protection bulkhead; Cumberland, $35,775 for a city hall annex; Towson, Baltimore County, $250,000 for water works and sewer improvements; Sparks, Baltimore County, $28,440 for school additions; Greensboro, Caroline County, $20,250 for a high school addition; Hempstead, Carroll County, $50,000 for water works; Westminister, Carroll County, $203,805 for a high school building; Cambridge, Dorchester County, $78,750 for a public school.

$11,413 to Point of Rocks.

Point of Rocks, Frederick County, $11,413 for schools; Bel Air, Harford County, $81,000 for schools; Elkridge, Howard County, $33,750 for a high school building; Hagerstown, Washington County, $72,152 for a school storm sewer; Salisbury, Wicomico County, $100,000 for three schools; Sharpstown, Wicomico, $46,000 for water works, and Ocean City, Worcester County, $110,009 for sewers and sewage disposal.

Road Plans Approved.

Baltimore, Sept. 26 (AP).—The State roads commission's $3,239,000 road and grade crossing construction program was partially approved today by Francis H. Drydan, State WPA head. All construction on the program was approved with the exception of the Annapolis boulevard from Mountain road to Severn River.

In a letter to Dr. Homer E. Tabler, Dryden said he was not including the Annapolis road in the general approval for three reasons.

These were that other provisions of the program call for spending $388,000 in Anne Arundel County, where the road would be located.

The road project does not provide for surfacing the highway. The general policy of the WPA is to approve only complete jobs.

The project contemplates leaving a gap in the road between Furnace branch and Mountain road. This, also, is contrary to the policy of completing every project begun.

Roads Attorneys Named

Baltimore, Sept. 26 (AP).—Appointment of five persons to handle legal aspects of the rights of way of the State roads commission was announced today by Gov. Harry W. Nice.

Those appointed are:

Dr. David G. Everhart, sr., retired dentist, of Frederick.

Miss Helen Elizabeth Brown, Baltimore attorney and Republican worker.

David M. Brenner, Baltimore attorney.

John A. Robinson, Bel Air attorney and editor.

L. Creston Beauchamp, of Somerset County, former Republican floor leader in the State senate.

The jobs were created by the last Legislature in the form of a budget amendment appropriating $10,000 for the work. The amendment was a compromise between Republicans, who sought to take all roads legal work from the office of the Democratic attorney general, and Democrats, who defended the status quo.

Son-in-Law Held In Shotgun Slaying

Fugitive Surrenders to County Authorities.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 26.—Othello Berry, 32, Negro, of Greenwood, will be given a hearing in trial justice court next week on a charge of killing his father-in-law, Robert Smith, 53, of Greenwood.

Smith was shot in the neck with a shotgun at the Greenwood Station Sunday. Witnesses said Smith was walking away from Berry after an argument when he was fired upon at about 20 paces.

Berry gave himself up to county officials Monday night, saying he was "tired and cold." He was arrested at the home of his uncle, near Greenwood, who notified officials.

$5,000 Is Asked to Rehabilitate Federalsburg Flood Victims

Appeal Is Made at Red Cross Regional Conference at Annapolis; 186 Families in Need of Furniture, Repairs to Their Homes.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 26.—An appeal for $5,000 to rehabilitate flood sufferers at Federalsburg was made today by the Rev. Irving C. Carpenter, who addressed a regional conference of Red Cross chapters from nine Maryland counties.

Carpenter, a leader in the rescue work in Federalsburg, is the chairman of the advisory board of the flood rehabilitation program. Mrs. Margaret Lewis, national Red Cross field representative, who brought the first relief truck to Federalsburg, also addressed the gathering.

After his address Carpenter, discussing the flood situation, said that 186 families were in need. He said their applications had been checked and investigated thoroughly and they were cases of actual distress.

Furniture Needed.

"We need funds for the replacement of furniture and the reconditioning of homes," he said. "We haven't had to do any mass feeding since shortly after the flood.

"We figure that $5,000 would restore the barest necessities to these families; it would not put them back where they were by any means. From the outside the town appears in good condition, but I go around as a minister. I know families who before the flood were comfortably situated who now have only a couple of chairs and a table. The other day I found a man and his wife eating sitting on lard cans.

"In the 21 days that have passed since the flood we have not had a death or a case of typhoid fever."

Carpenter said that donations for the flood sufferers were being accepted through the Red Cross. He said about $750 had been sent to Mrs. Lewis and himself for rehabilitation work.

50 Delegates Present.

About 50 delegates from the Red Cross chapters in Anne Arundel, St. Marys, Harford, Montgomery, Calvert, Charles, Prince Georges, Frederick and Carroll counties attended the conference, held in the House of Delegates chamber of the Statehouse.

Mrs. H. P. Levely, chairman of the Annapolis and Anne Arundel County chapters, presided. Carpenter, Mrs. Lewis, Dr. J. H. Janney and Walter S. Gard, assistant national director, Junior Red Cross, spoke after the group had been welcomed by Mayor Louis N. Phipps, of Annapolis.

'Hobby' Fair Postponed

Federalsburg, Md., Sept. 26 (AP).—The "Hobby" fair schedule to start here tomorrow has been indefinitely postponed.

The community fair, of which the "Hobby" show was a feature, was called off because of the disastrous floor that recently swept the town. The "Hobby" fair may be held early in December.

The show has always been a big drawing card for the community fair, bringing together many collectors of old coins, stamps, bric-a-brac and what-not.

3 Md. Conservation Employes Dropped

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 26.—State Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones today announced three State conservation department employes had been dismissed because of advanced age. He also said dates had been set for hearings on the appeals of two State roads commission employes from suspension.

Jones said he had issued removal orders for the conservation employes after they declined to take advantage of a hearing. He said Conservation Commissioner Robert F. Duer had reported them inefficient because of age.

Those dismissed were Alonzo Bozman, deputy commander of a conservation patrol boat; R. E. Purnell, district inspector, and W. W. Flowers, mate of the conservation department police steamer.

Jones said Leroy Ewer, suspended mechanic of Baltimore County, would be given a hearing Monday, and that William C. Newman, suspended road inspector of Kent County, would be given one Thursday.

Baltimore Sees Utility Law Go On Trial Today

Davis Among Counsel Challenging the Act's Constitutionality.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 26.—The first court hearings on a test of the constitutionality of the Federal public utility holding company act—the Wheeler-Rayburn law—will begin in Federal District Court here tomorrow.

The petition attacking the validity of the act, which was passed by the last Congress, was filed by trustee for the American States Public Service Co., now in process of reorganization under the Federal bankruptcy act. The company controls water and power companies in Illinois, Idaho, Michigan, California, Oregon, Montana, Delaware and Indiana.

Money interests in the test case are said to aggregate more than $1,000,000,000.

The petition contends that registration with the Securities and Exchange Commission, as required by the act, would entail heavy expense, lay a punishing burden on the original owners of the company and prevent completion of the reorganization.

The trustees state that they are acting under instruction of the court in carrying out a reorganization plan approved by the court and charge that the plan is in conflict with the holding company act.

WPA Parley Held On Storm Project

Hagerstown Drain System Would Cost $120,000.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 26.—Mayor I. M. Wertz and City Engineer Samuel Greenawalt conferred today with WPA officials in Washington regarding the northwest storm water drain project, which has been resubmitted after having been rejected by Harry L. Hopkins, Federal WPA administrator. The project had been approved by State WPA headquarters and by Secretary Harold Ickes, only to be turned down by Hopkins on the ground it did not meet Federal specifications.

The project, which would cost approximately $120,000, is held by local officials to be one of the most necessary projects submitted here.

Jolly Named As Municipal League Head

Winchester Chosen for '36 Session; Taxation System Assailed.

$2,400,000 Estimated as Cost of Pensions for State's Aged.

By the Associated Press.

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 26.—After election John R. Jolly, mayor of Petersburg, as its president, and selecting Winchester for the 1936 session, the League of Virginia Municipalities ended its two-day convention here this afternoon.

Public school appropriations and taxation methods of the commonwealth came in for sharp criticism while State regulation of the A. B. C. System and the distribution of liquor profits were the subjects of emphatic protests.

The matter of possible graft on the part of municipal officials was also brought forward in adoption of a resolution recommending clarification of the law governing contracts with cities on behalf of council members.

Ordway Puller, assistant city attorney of Richmond, called upon the convention and all city officials to work for election to the Legislature of men favorable to city welfare so that "we can go to the Legislature and tell our country brethren where to get off."

Other officers elected were Thomas W. White, vice mayor of Newport News, first vice president; Abe Schewel, councilman of Lynchburg, second vice president; Frank H. Wheeler, mayor of Clifton Forge, third vice president; Noel M. Walker, mayor of Tazewell, fourth vice president; Morgon L. Wallerstein, Richmond, executive secretary; E. M. Stull, councilman of Covington, committeeman.

The entire program as proposed by the legislative committee was adopted with only minor revisions.

William R. Shands, secretary of Gov. Peery's advisory legislative committee, estimated on the basis of incomplete data that the cost of providing pensions for persons in Virginia 65 years of age and over with Federal aid would approximate $2,400,000.

South Boston Frolics, Optimistic on Tobacco

Virginia Town World Capital for a Day; Senator Byrd's Daughter Is Crowned as Queen; Fifty Floats Entered in Parade.

By the Associated Press.

South Boston, Va., Sept. 26.—The smell of tobacco, the sight of tobacco and the sound of tobacco auctioneers' staccato cries today greeted the crowd flocking to the festival that made South Boston, at least for the day, the tobacco capital of the world.

The festival moved from ancient pageantry to modern methods of crop and price control.

Throngs which witnessed the history of the weed unrolled by 1,000 players last night gathered again today for speeches by Representative John Hosea Kerr, of North Carolina; William Collins, head of the AAA's tobacco section, and Representative Thomas Burch, of Virginia.

Miss Byrd Crowned.

Also featuring the second day of the festival were a re-creation of a typical tobacco auction, an exhibition golf match, a parade of the tobacco queen and her 34 maids of honor, the coronation of the queen, Miss Westwood Byrd, and a festival dance to close the day.

Conspicuous among the milling thousands were many farmers who left tobacco barns that dot the tobacco country and thronged into town to watch the show, jostle with strangers and speculate among themselves on what prices they would get for the product of their year's work when the market opens Tuesday.

To these growers, some in work clothes splotched with earth and smelling of smoke, George Finch, veteran auctioneer, was intelligible as he put on the typical auction. But to laymen watching the scene in a huge warehouse he spoke in an unknown tongue.

Optimistic on Prices.

In another vast warehouse finishing touches were put on the costly trappings of 50 floats that glided between banks of spectators this afternoon bearing the festival queen and her maids in the grand parade. Leading American tobacco companies and communities throughout the belt entered floats.

The town of South Boston spared no effort to dramatize its position as the geographical center of the bright belt and as the second greatest tobacco center, based on volume. In this respect, citizens said, they bowed only to Danville.

They predicted a greater season than last year, when 20,000,000 pounds of the fragrant weed were handled here, and expressed optimism as to prices next month.

750 Start Classes At State College

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 26.—With 750 young women from all parts of Virginia and a number from other States, the new session at the Harrisonburg State Teachers College got under way today. Preliminaries were disposed of and classes started.

Indications are that the enrollment will exceed that of last year. Registration figures will be compiled at the end of the month. Of those registered at the college now, 626 are boarding and 105 are day students. Eighty-five hold scholarships under the FERA.

The students were welcomed today by President S. P. Duke. He stressed the importance of the State colleges as being thoroughly representative of the traditions and ideals of Virginia.

Special Jury Indicts Hill In Slaying

Expected to Go on Trial Next Week in Cab Murder Case.

State Senator Cobourn Said to Be Choice of Kin for Counsel.

By the Associated Press.

Belair, Md., Sept. 26.—Kendall Hill was indicted today by the Harford County grand jury for the first degree murder of Albert Atwell, Baltimore taxi driver. Hill formerly was an attendant at the Perry Point Veterans' Hospital.

Summoned into special session by Circuit Court Judge Walter W. Preston to consider the case, the jury returned the indictment a little more than two hours after it convened. The trial probably will begin next week.

Atwell, married and the father of a young son, was robbed and strangled September 17. The day after his body was found near Havre de Grace, Lieut. Andrew Conners, of the State police, announced Hill had confessed the crime.

Seeking to raise funds to employ counsel for the defendant, Hill's relatives were said to be desirous that State Senator Harold E. Cobourn (Democrat), of Cecil, be appointed. The court's custom, however, is to appoint as counsel only a member of the Harford County bar.

Witnesses appearing before the jury today included Sergt. M. D. Brubaker, Corpl. C. E. Minnich and Patrolmen A. F. Anderson, of the State police; Elam Werntz, who found Atwell's body, and Chief of Police Lawrence Boyd, of Havre de Grace.

After hearing testimony for an hour the jury was forced to take a short recess because Sergt. Brubaker had gone to Elkton to bring Harry Jones to appear before the body. Cecil County officials declined, however, to let him appear.

Will Never Learn How to Pick Fight Winners, He Says

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—If I live to be a hundred, I suppose I will never really learn about fights. I have tried all systems and found that none of them were consistent. I have tried the blind stab, the hunch system, the pull-'em-out-of-a-hat system, I have tried reason and logic, I have trusted the evidence of my eyes. I have distrusted the evidence of my eyes. There seems to be no true form and no true formula to the game. Nobody obeys any set rule. What is right today is wrong tomorrow. How do you pick 'em?

It was plain to any man with two eyes that Louis would beat Baer. All you had to do was go to the training camps as I did and see Baer unable to block or avoid anything and everything thrown at him by a sparring partner, and then watch Louis, never missing a punch, strong and young and lightning fast. It was obvious that when the two were put together that Baer would have to catch everything that Louis threw at him, plus the interest and bonuses. But I once saw the same kind of evidence at Orangeburg, where I watched Mickey Walker training for Jack Sharkey, then still a top-notch boxer. I remember writing at the time that off his showing in the training camp, Walker shouldn't be allowed into the ring with Sharkey.

And yet Mr. Walker did all right for himself when the bell rang. He simply murdered that Sharkey for the first six or seven rounds. Sharkey was lucky to get a draw at the end of 15 rounds. And yet, off the form, Walker shouldn't have been able to go more than 10 minutes with Sharkey at the most. Was there an agreement on that fight? I almost hope there was so that I could regain some faith in what I see. It would then be so simple to say—"Louis great; Baer looks terrible—therefore I pick Louis."

IT should have been evident to any man who has ever made a dy of athletics and athletes that the life Baer was leading from the time he started fighting was sure to burn him out while still young, and that the first time he faced a young, strong man after he was champion, he would meet with disaster. That young, strong man turned out to be James J. Braddock, a heavyweight who had been beaten almost more times than Louis had victories at the time.

And still, in the face of that conclusive evidence that Baer couldn't fight any more and had fallen a victim to his speed of living, I picked Baer. Why? Don't I ever learn? Learn from what and from whom? From fighters like the late Harry Greb and the present Maxie Rosenbloom Greb broke every training rule and every health rule ever laid down and was a whirlwind to the end of his days. Maxie Rosenbloom used to train in night clubs and nobody could lay a glove on him in the ring. He had amazing and apparently inexhaustible fountains of energy playing within him.

My hunch on Baer was a thoroughly bade one, which is probable a good thing for me. It isn't good for a man to have too much success with hunches. He gets to figuring that he has something that nobody else has, which is, of course, nonsense of purest ray serene, and when the faithful old hunch lets you down, it lets you down hard. Here is a strange thing. Had Baer beaten Braddock, I would have picked Louis to knock Baer out had they then met. But I felt sure that Baer would bounce back hard after the Braddock disgrace. He did bounce hard, but not back.

I HAD Primo Carnera figured out right from the first night I saw him against Bouquillon at the Salle Wagram, in Paris. My eyes

Myer's 4 Hits In Row Are Futile

His Homer With Man on in 7th Cheats Murphy of Shutout.

Nat Rookie Fills Bases With Walks in First Two Innings.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The Yankees took advantage of Dick Lanahan's remote control today and beat Washington. In fact, Lanahan's control was so remote it bordered on no control at all. The young Washington left-hander issued three walks and hit a batter in the first two innings to establish the Yanks in a four-run lead that was sucient.

The ultimate score was 4 to 2. It was Washington's farewell game of the season in New York, played before 75,000 empty seats and scarcely 1,000 paying customers.

Lanahan pitched tolerable ball after those first two innings, blanking the Yankees until the sixth, when Leon Pettit relieved him. Pettit and Jack Russell shut the Yankees out over the remainder of the distance, but young Jimmy Murphy was in fine fettle for the Yanks, uelling every Washington threat except in the seventh inning when Buddy Myer lifted a home run into the right-field bleachers with a man on base.

Myer in Batting Race.

Manly through the efforts of Myer, who slammed out four straight hits in five times at bat and re-installed himself in the race with Joe Vosmik, of the Indians, for the league batting title, the Nats outhit the Yankees, 10 to 7. Myer raised his average to .345, compared to Vosmik's figure of .352, with three games remaining in which to wipe out Vosmik's advantage.

The Yanks benefited in the first inning from Rolfe's luck double that dropped just out of Mihalic's reach and then Lanahan walked Chapman and hit Gehrig on the hand to fill the bases with one out. He disposed of Hoag on a pop to Myer, but Glenn drilled a single through the pitcher's legs to put the Yanks in a 2-0 lead.

With two out in the second inning, Lanahan walked Murphy, pitched a single to Hill and walked Rolfe to fill the bases again. Chapman drove a double past Lewis to score Murphy and Hill.

Nats Avert Shut-out.

This 4-0 state of affairs existed until the seventh, despite frequent Washington hits. Mihalic led off the Nats' seventh with a walk, and then it was that Myer pounded his first homer in the right-field bleachers. Travis prolonged the rally with a double to right center, with none as yet out, but Stone, Lewis and Bolton were retired in order.

The Nats had the tying run on base with two out in the eighth after Kuhel singled, and Richardson fumbled Mihalic's grounder, but Myer could not produce a fifth straight hit. He lined to Hill and the rally expired.

Fort Meade Seeking Grid Game Sunday

Sailboat Races Today Usher In Regatta

Climax Will Come Sunday With Ninth Renewal of President's Cup Event.

WITH sailboat races today as a prelude, the ninth annual President's Cup regatta will get under way on the Potomac River.

The regatta has its big day Sunday in a battle between big speedboats for the President's Cup, won for two years running by George Reis' El Lagarto.

More than 50 craft, piloted chiefly by Washington skippers, are entered in the final free-for-all 5-mile race, while a hlaf-dozen or more competitors are listed for sailing canoes, comet and moth class races.

A pagenat with scores of decorated and lighted boats will be held tonight, followed by a grand ball at which the queen of the regatta will be crowned.

U. S. Titles at Stake.

Class "A" and "B" outboard championships for amateurs and professionals will be held Saturday, along with the first heat of the President's Cup event. National championships are set Saturday in the 135-cubic-inch hydroplane, 91-cubic-inch hydroplane, and Class "I" inboard races.

The class "C" outboard and class "E" inboard race finals are scheduled Sunday, as well as the free-for-all outboard handicap, the 225-cubic-inch hydroplane, class "H" inboard, the American speedboat championship and the last two heats of the President's Cup race.

El Lagarto will have five rivals in the battle for the gold cup. They are Edmond Guggenheim's Miss Saranac, of Long Island; Jack Dunn's Jay-Dee, of Miami; Victor Kliesrath's Hotsy-Totsy II, of South Bend, Ind.; Horace Dodge's Impishi, of New York, and Herbert Mendelson's Notre Dame, of Detroit.

Peacock Tops First Foes in Amateur

Favorite Enters Golf Semifinals With Webb, Yoder and Greene.

Field Cut to Four in D.C. Championship; Webb Bests Pitt, 4 and 3.

By Dave Herman.

ROGER PEACOCK vs. Levi Yoder.
Hickman Greene vs. Tommy Webb, jr.

That briefly tells who survived yesterday's first and second round matches of the District amateur golf championship and who will clash in the semifinals at Washington Golf and Country Club's hilly course this morning.

Peacock, medalist, 1932 champion, heavy favorite to win back his title, will meet Yoder, fellow club companion from Indian Spring, at 10 a. m., and five minutes later he transplanted Louisianan, Greene, transplanted Louisianan, Greene, will tackle Webb, th ehope of the host club.

The finals will start at 1:30.

Stroking the ball better than ever, hitting every shot like a champion, and making few mistakes, Peacock eliminated Bernard (Tops) Dennell, of Kenwood, 6 and 5, and Bob Albertus, of Washington, 4 and 3. Peacock finished 1 under par against Dennell, and came back with a similar performance against the tall Albertus, who was some chickens as a golfer in Philadelphia before he migrated to the District a few months ago.

Yoder Beats Friends.

Little Yoder conquered two Indian Spring pals, Volney Burnett, the firefighter, 5 and 4, and Tommy Belshe, District Golf Association president, 4 and 3. Yoder, too, was 1 under par in both matches.

When the 200-pound Tommy Webb, who starred as a center on Maryland's football team, teed off in the qualifying round Wednesday, he said: "I'm playing just for the fun of it—I haven't hit a ball in 16 days."

Webb qualified with the greatest of ease, scornig a 74. Yesterday he knocked out Reese R. Hair, former Washington Club champion, 4 and 3, with some rock-steady shooting, and in the afternoon blasted out the 1931 titleholder, Harry Pitt, of Manor, 4 and 2. This Webb wove a neat texture of pars and birdies around Pitt, going out in 35 to stand 1 up, and finishing 4—3—5—)—4—3—3, three under par, with a sensational eagle 3 on the fifteenth hole. Mr. Pitt, who in his day has played golf as hot, if not better than this, was powerless before the big Washington slugger, who knocks 'em a mile off the tee.

Greene's victims were little Ralphie Fowler, of the host club, and John C. Shorey, of Kenwood, whose 69 gave him runner-up honors to Peacock in the medal round, and was expected to be Peacock's foremost challenger.

Greene Wins on 20th.

Greene had a narrow escape from defeat in the morning, canning a 30-footer for a birdie deuce on the twentieth hole to eliminate Fowler.

Against Shorey, who lost by 3 and 2, he unleashed the full fury of his scoring power, shooting the 16 holes in 1 under par, after going out in 35 to take a 1-up lead.

Greene riddled par on the back side with a running fire of pars and birdies, winning the eleventh with a deuce, the fifteenth with a birdie 4, and the sixteenth with a par 4 as Shorey three-putted.

Five of the matches were tightly contested. Albertus had to hole a 40-footer for a birdie 3 on the eighteenth to eliminate Luther Corwin Steward, jr., of Columbia, in the morning, and Belshé put out M. Parker Nolan, Congressional adonis, on the nineteenth. Shorey found he couldn't loaf against Erwin P. Hair, and had a tussle winning, 2 and 1, after a poor first nine stand.

Match Managerial Wits in Crucial Series

West Expected To Get Louis' Next Fight

Detroit or Chicago Held Probable Site of Go With Schmeling.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Busy Mike Jacobs, already in the midst of planning a European and South American tour for Joe Louis, halted long enough today to consider a proposition that would shift the site of the proposed Louis-Max Schmeling match next June to Detroit, home town of the Chocolate Soldier.

Representatives of the Ford Motor Co., unsuccessful bidders for Tuesday's duel, in which Louis shattered Max Baer in four rounds, saw Jacobs again today with the result that he will leave Sunday night for Detroit for conferences Monday and Tuesday.

a guarantee of $125,000 for the

The Ford interests offered Jacobs Baer-Louis fight, which he turned down. Believing now that Louis' next big match may be staged most profitably in the Midwest, Jacobs is decidedly interested in the new proposition.

Sees $1,500,000 Gate.

"I think Louis and Schmeling would draw beter than $1,500,000 in Detroit, and there's also a possibility that Chicago, where Louis will make his future home, will get the match," Jacobs said. "If the ball parks there are not large enough, the sponsors will build an arena just for the fight."

Jacobs was an encouraging half of the Tex Rickard brain trust when the late Madison Square Garden promoter took Jack Dempsey's first fight with Gene Tunney to Philadelphia and his second to Chicago, insisting that a change of scenery from New York was necessary in each case to offset the financial drain of continued million-dollar gates. He favors the same principle now, as the first of Rickard's successors to hit the magic million-dollar mark in fight gate receipts.

While Louis planned to stay here until Sunday, and then take his bride, the former Marva Trotter, to Detroit for the world series, Baer left town for his ranch in Cacramento, Calif., reconsidering by proxy his announcement that he was through with the prize ring forever.

"Max wants to fight again," his manager, Ancil Hoffman, said as Baer and his wife, his mother and father and his brother, Buddy, gathered on the train. "I've told him that if he goes back, stays on the ranch, goes into training, and shows me he is capable of leading a good life, I will bring him back."

Cubs to Face Both Deans Today

Double-Header Booked as Rain Prevents Crucial Game.

Lee and Root to Hurl as Chicago Seeks to Clinch Pennant.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 26.—Rainfall, as steady as the march of the carefree Chicago Cubs, washed out Charlie Grimm's plans to clinch the National League pennant today and gave the four-down-and-four-to-go St. Louis Cardinals a merciful rest for a final double-header rally tomorrow.

The final hopes of the faded and worn world's champions will be the Dean brothers in tomorrow's twin bill, starting at 12:45 p. m. (central standard time). Given the "amazing" record of four days' rest, Dizzy will fire all he's got in a desperate attempt to snap the Cub 19-game winning streak in the opener. If he succeeds, brother Paul, at his own request, will pitch the second. Should the great Dizzy fail, it will be all over.

"General" Bill Lee, giant right-hander whom the Cubs purchased from the Cardinal farm at Columbus two years ago for $35,000, will oppose the rested Dizzy in a mound duel that promises to be almost as exciting and close as the victorious 1-to-0 battle of Lonnie Warneke over brother Paul yesterday. Following Lee will be the veteran Charlie Root, whose revived right arm has been the one big reason for the sensational pennant drive of the Grimm men.

"We'll clinch the pennant tomorrow with Lee," shouted Grimm, as he joined several of his players in a pinnochle game. "Maybe this rain is a break for the Cardinals, but I

Army—Its All-Time Honor Roll

FEW colleges can match this all-time roll call of Army football stars, particularly in the back field. Big John McEwan, physically the strongest of West Point's many fine centers, had a keen tactical brain which later earned him the head coach's baton at Oregon and Holy Cross. "Moe" Daly, present Army line tutor, was more sagacious and dependable though less spectacular than Ed Garbisch, the wide-ranging goal kicker.

"Red" Erwin, whose guard play wrecked several Yale lines, became equally renowned as a polo player. Gus Farwick was a keyman on the unsurpassed 1926 line. Milton Summerfelt's penchant for intercepting passes earned him publicity such as few linemen get. Rough, tough "King" Boyers, a scrapper to the manner born, captained the memorable 1902 team.

Paul Bunker, tre first of Army's nationally known players, was a Jack of all trades, equally formidable at tackle or full back. He is a colonel of Field Artillery today. "Babe" Weyand, giant tackle of the famous 1914 eleven, became a major of Infantry and a football historian. Pop Graves learned so much about the game in his brilliant career as a tackle that he wrote the "Lineman's Bible," a treatise still used at West Point. Dan Pullen was a raw-boned Alaskan who might have scaled even greater heights but for a chronic knee injury.

Lou Merrillat will be remembered as the ubiquitous little end who bobbed up under Prichard's hair-trigger passes. Lou could go get 'em like a Tris Speaker. Walter Smith could work on a tackle with devastating effect and Charley Born was another end of the same stripe.

Tom Hammond, star flanker of the 1904 Army team, made a great war record in France. Despite his colonel's rank, he insisted on marching afoot with the Doughboys.

Charley Daly, who also made Harvard's All-Time team, transferred to West Point from Cambridge and continued his dazzling football career as a cadet. He ran through Navy from kick-off for a touchdown. Vernon Prichard, who learned how to throw threadneedle passes from Dorais, of Notre Dame, was more truly an Army product. Prichard's basket ball field day against Navy in 1913 revolutionized service-school strategy. Hyatt and Hackett, a pair of chess-brained quarter backs, deserve high rating.

None but Elmer Oliphant could play full back on an All-Time Army eleven! This low-slung, chunky Purdue transfer could split a line like a projectile. Oliphant retired from the service and became a prominent insurance executive. Chris Cagle, most spectacular of Army carriers, would have been even greater under a more deceptive system of offense than that of 1926-'29. He could "go to town" from any point on the field, combining speed, power and a hip-shimmy worthy of a hula hula dancer. Texas Jack Buckler, a scissors-striding knifer, was a more accurate passer and kicker than Cagle.

"Lighthorse" Harry Wilson, the spearhead of the mighty 1926 team, played four years at West Point after three seasons at Penn State, and missed only one tackle on defense. He had a deceptive fade-away. Wilson is a flight lieutenant today. Ray Stecker stabbed like a bayonet off tackle, and once through, often went all the way for a score. Henry Torney, whose goal-to-goal run beat Yale in 1905, was the hardest line breaker of his era.

Gold Foam Outlasts Favorites to Triumph in Havre Feature

Winner Beats Black Helen, Rosemont

9,000 See BostonBrook, Rank Outsider, Bid for Victory.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Sept. 26.—Gold Foam, winner of the Travers Stakes, displayed four hot hooves here this afternoon to win the Roseland, a mile and 70 yards race, the day's feature. Behind the representative of the Starmount Stable and last and next to last in the four-horse field, came E. R. Bradley's Black Helen, winner of many stakes, and Rosemont, with a triumph over Omaha to his credit.

The horse that didn't have a ghost of a chance and the longest shot in the race was the one that made the best showing against the speed of Gold Foam. This was Boston Brook, of Bowie "poison" fame. The Bostonian colt not only finished in back of Gold Foam, but looked all the part of a winner at the sixteenth pole. However, Jockey Luther managed to find just enough speed left in Gold Foam to take the decision.

After Black Helen had enjoyed a brief lead going to the clubhouse turn, Gold Foam was rushed to the front. The crowd of 9,000 which had put the heavy money on Black Helen and Rosemont waited patiently for the moves of their choices. But there was none.

Gold Foam was third choice in the wagering and paid $9.20. The time of 1:43 2-5 was mediocre.

Double Pays High.

Daily-double stock bounced toward the clouds today when a mutuel of $569.40 was paid by the popular twin wager. After $10,666 had been passed through the windows, Atholton and Undulate teamed to provide a small fortune for less than 20 bettors.

Howard Bruce's Atholton won the first race at a $13.60 mutuel by following the pace of A. G. Vanderbilt's Superficial into the stretch and then drawing out under a nice ride by Jockey Balaski. The Vanderbilt filly quit to a walk in the last quarter and Callitaday and Still Alarm charged into the place and show money

Sioux Chief scored a surprise victory in the second race by the simple method of staying in front from start to finish under the riding of Jockey W. Horn. Those who anticipated the sudden speed of Sioux Chief participated in a collection of $19.40. Tiddlewink, second most of the way, was second, and Occidental, third most of the way, was third.

O'Hara Has Winner.

Walter O'Hara, owner of the Narragansett Park track, saw his Undulate score a well-earned victory in the third sprint of the day. The Vanderbilt entry of Cherry Stone and Balcony ran, one, two, behind the gelded son of Purchase. Peters got Undulate off cleverly and then drew back off the pace set by Cherry Stone. Nearing the wire, Undulate gradually to go over the necessary ground to go over the line a head to the good. The winner paid $14.50.

High Chair, moving to the front just inside the stretch turn and apparently the winner of the fourth race, stumbled and only good horsemanship on the part of Jockey Eddie Smith saved both from being thrown in the path of horses. High Chair was found to have a broken left front leg and was destroyed. Darkling, the favorite, made it three straight victories, paying $3.80.

Brunswick Withdraws From Tricounty Loop

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 26.—Brunswick, first half champion of the Tri-County League, withdrew from the circuit at a meeting last night. The titleholders decided to surrender their franchise rather than abide by a decision of Umpire Alton Twenty, who forfeited a game between Cedar Grove and Brunswick last Sunday. The league upheld the umpire's decision in awarding the game to Cedar Grove when the contest ended in a free-for-all fight.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ATHOLTON, $13.60, $5.70, $4.10; CALLITADAY, $4.10, $3.10; STILL ALARM, $3.60.

ATHOLTON, rated in pursuit of Superficial, responded readily when reaching the home stretch, challenged strongly in the closing furlong to gain a slight lead, then outstayed CALLITADAY nearing the finish. CALLITADAY went in the first flight until well settled in her stride, swung to the outside at the stretch turn, but hung after getting on almost even terms with the leader in the closing furlong. STILL ALARM, as usual sluggish in the early racing, came with a belated rush in the last five-sixteenths. GRAND KNIGHT lacked speed to reach a contending position. He finished gamely at the end. SUPERFICIAL displayed good speed for five furlongs, then stopped. She should improve off this race. FAR ORY showed a good effort for five furlongs. SENTRY weakened. The others were outrun.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIOUX CHIEF, $19.40, $7.00, $4.20; TIDDLEWINK, $3.50, $2.70; OCCIDENTAL, $3.40.

SIOUX CHIEF had good speed to move into command shortly after the start, moved clear when leaving the back stretch, then was kept under punishment all during the stretch drive to withstand TIDDLEWINK. The latter followed closest to the winner from the beginning, made repeated efforts in the closing drive, but failed to menace the winner seriously. OCCIDENTAL raced forwardly and came with good courage under a stout drive at the end. MARGE bettered her position steadily after falling back directly after the start. BY SURPRISE finished stoutly. JANE ELLEN went evenly. CURLING could not reach a contending position. The others were never factors.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—UNDULATE, $14.50, $5.40, $4.50; CHERRY STONE, $2.20, $2.40; BALCONY, $2.40.

UNDULATE, away fast then taken under slight restraint during the early running, came stoutly after being placed to punishment for the final drive and, in a strong finish, was up in the last strides. CHERRY STONE had good speed to take command immediately, saved ground while setting a steady pace, then continued stoutly when placed to a tenacious drive. BALCONY, close up and rated nicely, came with good energy for the closing test. QUEEN GOVANS, slow to get into racing stride, closed a good gap in the last three sixteenths. WEDGE LAD was unable to threaten seriously. LA MARQUISE was outrun. CADZIE was done after a half-mile.

THE DAILY DOUBLE (first and third races) PAID—$569.40.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:55. Off at 3:56. Winner, H. Nusseitzer's br. m. (5), by Macaw—Beaming. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:50 1-5, 1:15 2-5, 1:41 2-5, 1:55.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARKLING, $3.80, $2.70, $2.40; SUNWAY, $4.80, $3.10; BARNEY SEXTON, $4.60.

DARKLING, kept under pressure from the beginning, rallied strongly when reaching the final turn, went up between HIGH CHAIR and SUNWAY when entering the home stretch, took command under a drive when HIGH CHAIR broke down and outstayed SUNWAY at the end. SUNWAY, reserved within striking distance of the leaders, challenged strongly when leaving the back stretch, then held on stoutly nearing the finish. BARNEY SEXTON was rated in front until forced to a drive, then weakened steadily after coming wide into the home stretch. ARAB had no excuses. HIGH CHAIR moved to the front without effort at the last elbow, and was racing strongly when he went badly lame at the stretch turn where he was pulled up.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:26. Off at once. Winner, Starmount Stable's ch. c. (3), by Golden Broom—Assembly. Trained by J. M. Milburn. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:12 2-5, 1:36 3-5, 1:43 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLD FOAM, $9.20, $4.20, out; BOSTON BROOK, $5.90, out; BLACK HELEN, out. (No show mutuels).

GOLD FOAM, full of run from the start, assumed command when reaching the back stretch, went along on his own courage to open up a winning lead early, then withstood a hard drive when challenged and just lasted long enough to outstay BOSTON BROOK. The latter went up on the inside of BLACK HELEN when leaving the home stretch, then finished wearing the winner down at every stride approaching the finish. BLACK HELEN, kept under urging from the beginning, failed to threaten. ROSEMONT was steadied for six furlongs, then failed to rally when placed to punishment.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:58. Off at 4:58. Winner, A. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BEHEMOTH, $20.00, $10.40, $5.30; SHIP EXECUTIVE, $8.70, $4.30; HOOPS, $3.40.

BEHEMOTH, placed forwardly after entering the back stretch, worked his way to the front readily when reaching the home stretch, was kept under pressure and came out slowly. SHIP EXECUTIVE, in tight quarters to drop back slightly at the right at the end. HOOPS, slower than usual to strike his stride, improved in the last half-mile. SASSABY had good speed for the first seven furlongs while being rated, but failed to stay when put to a drive. SEA FOX began tiring after six furlongs. ATMOSPHERE could not engage the leaders. RESPECT had no excuses.

SEVENTH RACE—One and three-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:26. Off at 5:27½. Winner, Mrs. M. N. Bond's br. g. (6), by Chilhowee—Nyassa. Trained by Jerry B. Bond. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:25, 0:50 1-5, 1:16 1-5, 1:42, 2:02 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PENCADER, $9.90, $5.10, $3.70; WOULD DARE, $5.40, $3.50; PATIENT SAINT, $4.30.

PENCADER, going in his best form, went into contention with a rush after leaving the back stretch, was taken out off the rail when reaching the home stretch after displacing ABSTAIN and had enough in reserve to stall off WOULD DARE. The latter, slow to settle in his stride, worked his way up on the inside of his field and came willingly in the final drive. PATIENT SAINT reached the leaders rapidly, but had too much taken out of him and he hung in the last furlong. POST BRIGADE went forwardly placed and had no mishaps. CANIMAR came with a bold rush in the last half-mile. ABSTAIN and MONEDY were used up in the first seven furlongs. GOOD SENSE retired early.

Killing Frost Menaces Late Corn Harvest

Futures Spurt on Report Seven States Will Be Affected.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Possibilities of big damage by frost tonight to the Nation's corn crop swept the corn market suddenly upward today almost 2 cents a bushel.

Official forecasts indicated peril of frost tonight in seven States with the killing variety looked for on a broad scale. Double danger was feared, the corn crop as a whole being later this season than usual, and in addition a widespread killing frost now would be much earlier than generally is the case.

Corn closed strong, ⅞ to 1⅞ above yesterday's finish; December, 59⅜ to 59¾; wheat, ⅜ off to ¼ up; December, 98⅛ to 98¼; oats, unchanged to ⅛ lower, and provisions, 17 to 32 cents down.

A notable feature of corn trading was the fact that the Chicago September delivery of corn outdid the season's previous high price record. This circumstance was mainly due to increasing concern over dearth of corn available to be delivered on September contracts here. The liveliest jump of corn prices, however, was witnessed in the December delivery, a new crop month which would be directly affected by crop losses due to frost.

Active general buying of corn futures accompanied the rise of prices. Some interests were inclined to regard part of the demand for December corn as brought about by lifting of hedges against feed wheat. Aside from anxiety aroused by frost predictions, wet weather prevailing over the corn belt was expected to delay the maturity of the new crop.

Wheat and oats fluctuated nervously within narrow limits. The wheat market bearishly influenced by beneficial rains over dry areas of domestic winter territory, Southwest in particular. Predictions of smallest world wheat supplies in 13 years had no immediate market effect. An authoritative estimate of the world wheat crop was 330,000,000 bushels, less than the short crop of 1934.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Work Irregularly Lower in Quiet Trading—Bonds Suffer From Neglect—Foreign Currencies Sink Under Dollar.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, Sept. 26.—Lack of interest in the bull side of stocks and bonds and in some of the commodity markets continued. Turnover in stocks again was around 1,000,000 shares and prices were irregular at best and fractionally lower in all sections most of the day. Government bonds were softer and others were neglected. December wheat was ¼ of a cent down at 98¼ cents a bushel.

In spite of the early sloshing around, some of the market's favorite stocks pushed into new high ground in the last hour of trading. Demand for American Telephone developed strongly and the price rose above 140. An active speculative counter to be shoved up to a new high price, in the good old-fashioned manner, was Radio preferred B stock.

In sharp contrast to that was the heavy drop in Warren Pipe. The shares fell a half dozen points on the cutting in two of the quarterly dividend, one of those rare developments that seems to have caught the market unprepared. A number of preferred stock issues were active and climbed to 2 points. Du Pont rose a point, but the chemical group was mixed.

Special Weakness.

Fractional losses were made by the majority of stocks in the amusement, motor, accessory, store, metal, oil, steel, mail order, railroad, utility, rubber, food and equipment groups. Special weakness cropped out in General Railway Signal, United Fruit, Corn Products, Briggs, and May Department Stores. Steel showed little strength. Great Northern continued active and firm. Chrysler and Owens Glass were among the few to act as though communication lines with friends were open.

News from the war and peace centers of Europe was conflicting and the foreign currencies kept to a narrow range. Sterling was down from the dollar and the gold currencies also slipped. Weakness in French money indicated a renewal of gold shipments from Paris. It may not be generally realized that, since devaluation of the dollar, this country has taken about two billions in gold from other countries. It hasn't done us any good, but has worked a deflationary job on them.

That gold, which could be made the basis for 10 or 15 times as much credit, has kept speculative markets interested in the subject of inflation. Largely the incoming gold has done nothing to expand credit in use, although it has greatly expanded excess credit of the banks.

Hesitancy of the stock market, with the trading volume reduced, suggests doubts in the minds of large operators, and of investors on some score. It may be over the quality of autumn business and it may be principally the caution banked up by the war talk. On top of that the market has had a long advance, with virtually no recession since the beginning of the summer. Roughly the rise in stocks was uninterrupted, except for a little jockeying in midsummer, from the time the Supreme Court overthrew the noxious NRA until President Roosevelt suggested that normal respiration was not to be regarded as permanent.

Breathing Spell.

The President's breathing spell remark, instead of bringing on a fresh advance in stocks, was followed by a day or two of advance, on the momentum gained two or three days previous to publication of the letter containing his observations, and then by profit-taking and hesitation. It would be straining a point to credit the expression of Administration policy with the halt in prices, but at least the record might be kept straight as to the immediate effect.

A really serious war in Europe probably would bring on liquidaton of stocks in this market, for a while at least, notwithstanding the much stronger position now than in 1914, when foreigners owned more of our securities and when we owned less gold. The great dictator of prices would be business and the trouble with business now is slackness in international trade. Wars always injure international trade, although sometimes they give fictitious prosperity to certain industries and tend to inflate food prices, rally a bear point on any country's prosperity.

Gossip.

The long-awaited split in Coca Cola is said to be set for announcement at the end of the week, probably 4 for 1, along with calling of 72,000 A shares . . . Some bullish news about ready on Curtiss-Wright . . . Rise in Pantepec, recent feature for curb trading, was well prepared by circulation of dope in the old-fashioned way . . . Investigation by authorities said to have been made two weeks ago, with nothing amiss discovered . . . Fresh version of the old rumor of resignation of Secretary Morgenthau places Joseph Kennedy in the job . . . Such a change would be popular in Wall Street but no credit was given the rumor . . .

Washington Bank Debits Fifth in U. S.

Sharp Drop Erases Lead Held Over Nation for 3 Months.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

A sharp drop in Washington bank clearings during the week ended on Wednesday erased a three-month lead and pushed the local gain over 1934 into fifth place among the 22 leading cities of the Nation.

An aggregate of $17,122,809 reported during the six business days represented an increase of 25 per cent over the same week of 1934. A week ago clearings totaled $19,059,551. Four other cities—Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Portland and Seattle—increased their 1934 performance by larger margins.

The country as a whole, according to figures compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, ran 20.2 per cent ahead of the corresponding 1934 total. Total clearings at the 22 leading cities in the United States for the period were $5,040,128,000. During the same week of 1934 settlements were $4,193,245,000.

At New York City clearings were $3,253,871,000, an increase of 21.8 per cent over the amount reported last year, while the aggregate for centers outside of New York City of $1,786,257,000 was 17.4 per cent.

The feature of the report throughout September has been the uniformity of gain that appeared in the comparison with the clearings reported a year ago at most cities.

There was some reduction in the latest report from the preceding week in both years because of the heavy payments on account of Federal taxes due in the middle of the month, and these were particularly large this year.

For the past week, clearings were below those of the preceding week by $806,186,000; a year ago, for the same two weeks, the decline was $677,594,000.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

STRANGE as it seems, death by burning was the only new misfortune that could befall him, claimed the life of King Stanislaus Leczinski of Poland in 1766. His own words of less than a year before were strangely prophetic of this fate.

Old, and sure that his end was near at hand, King Stanislaus said, in 1765, "I am the most aged king in Europe; what then is to be expected? I have endured, too, as many hardships, and encountered more accidents than most men. Except being burned, I do not know what I have not suffered. Of new mischances, there is really only some catastrophe by fire that could befall me."

Early the next year he was destined to experience the catastrophe he had mentioned. On the morning of February 5, he finished prayers and walked feebly to the open wood fire to light his pipe. As he bent he probably fainted, at least he fell forward into the fire. When a sentry outside smelled burning cloth he ran in to discover the king unconscious and fatally burned.

The tensile strength of glass fibers amounts to about half a million pounds to the square inch. Commercial alloy steel wires have a tensile strength of 200,000 to 300,000 pounds to the square inch. Thus glass will support a load of about twice that which commercial alloy steel wire will support.

Steel wire, however, in special alloys, can be made to have a much greater strength. Steel wire that will support 750,000 pounds to the square inch has been made, and Government experts say that if greater strength were desired it probably could be obtained with steel.

Warren's accounts were recently audited by the State accountant. On June 30 a shortage of $1,680 was discovered, but in a more extended audit made as of September 14, the books of the trial magistrate were found to balance, the amonut of the deficit being placed in the bank on that date.

DICK TRACY — That Letter

CHIEF, HAVE YOU SEEN TRACY? JUNIOR, HERE, IS LOOKING FOR HIM.
COME TO THINK OF IT, I HAVEN'T SEEN HIM AT ALL TODAY, PAT.
WHEN DID YOU SEE HIM LAST?
WHY — YESTERDAY NOON — IN HIS OFFICE. I STEPPED IN THERE TO GIVE HIM A LETTER THAT CAME IN FOR HIM.
A LETTER?
YES, JUST A LETTER. OF COURSE IT'S GOT NOTHING TO DO WITH HIS NOT BEING AROUND — — — BUT I JUST REMEMBERED THAT'S THE LAST TIME I SAW HIM.
WHAT SHOULD I DO? WHAT CAN I DO? I'VE GOT TO MAKE A DECISION OF SOME KIND. I CAN'T IGNORE THIS.
